Solly's Preferred Creditor
An Imitation Mussolini
A Time to Hang On Shooting Is Dangerous

— By Arthur Brisbane —

The real BAD NEWS is now out. Uncle Sam is in the position of Solly Wertheim's "preferred creditor." His friend said: "I am going to fail, and you are a preferred creditor." "Thank you," said Mr. Wertheim. "How much do I get on the dollar?"

"Nothing."

"Then how am I a preferred creditor?"

"You are a preferred creditor, because you know NOW that you're not going to get anything. The others won't know it for several months."

Uncle Sam knows NOW that he isn't going to get anything. He is an unusual "preferred creditor," because, on top of that information, he is lending more money

Plans may change, but, at present, plans of the United States in regard to Germany seem to include continuing loans already made, refraining from demanding, or accepting, any German war payments, excusing England, France, Italy and other countries from all war payments for one year, thus making it easy for them to help Germany, if they choose.

What th will choose depends on various things, particularly the extent to which financial collapse, or revolution, in Germany might INJURE THEM.

There was a fair imitation of panic on the Paris stock exchange yesterday, and that sort of thing stimulates action.

French high finance is said to have convinced its government that it is necessary to prevent further disintegration in Germany, just as American high finance convinced this country that it was necessary to do something to avoid loss of billions, foolishly lent abroad by American investors.

German newspapers print a yarn to the effect that France has demanded the expulsion from Germany of Hitler, a German imitation of Mussolini, leading an imitator Fascist German party. Hitler is alleged to be waiting for this crisis to "throw Germany into my hands," and enable him, leading a combination of German Fascists and Communists, to rescue the fatherland.

Hitler is supposed to be the "Great Unknown" that will do for Germany what Napoleon did for France, after the revolution.

The story of French hostility to Hitler is well calculated to increase Hitler's popularity and importance in the minds of unintelligent Germans.

But as it happens, unintelligent Germans are not numerous. The average German knows that it would take a good deal more than 100 copies of Hitler to make one Hindenburg.

And the German nation, fortunately, has been educated for more than 50 years by the Social-Democratic party. Among other things, the, have learned how to think, on public questions.

They will come out of this trouble, for they have science, patience and industry. Billions of dollars are not everything.

President Hoover said America must go to the rescue of Germany and Austria, and stocks went bounding upwards. That happened in spite of the fact that the President's message meant that many of our European customers were close to bankruptcy, and many of our billions, sent abroad, might never come back.

Early yesterday, speculators, badly frightened, forced prices down. They began thinking, and prices went part way up again

The man who has made a wise investment is foolish if he lets it go at this time, if he has the power to hold it.

The wise will remember that everything comes back. What goes up comes down, and vice versa. This country hasn't lost anything except a few billions of dollars, nothing like half as much as one year's United States payroll. And what we have lost is nothing compared with what we made in the war.

It is a good time to remember that "money" lost, SOMETHING lost * * * honor lost, MUCH lost * * * courage lost, EVERYTHING lost."

At White Plains, N. Y., striking laborers failed to obey police orders to disperse, and one was shot. Police vacations are cancelled, reserves are held in station houses, with tear gas bombs, and other effective equipment.

If the safety of the police was menaced, the shooting is justified. But it is well to repeat: "SHOOTING SHOULD BE POSTPONED AS LONG AS POSSIBLE."

Millions of men in the United States have been idle and in want since 1929, without resort to violence.

Violence should not come

RELEASE OF GIRL LEADER DEMANDED

A surging, shouting throng of Rhode Island strike sympathizers arrived in front of the East Boston immigration station this afternoon and loudly demanded the release of Ann Berlak, "Red Flame," facing deportation as an alien.

Waving placards on which their demands were printed, the demonstrators marched up and down in front of the station, shouting for the "Red Flame," and threatening to show the world a "real strike."

Immigration guards closed the gates to the station, and while a group of inspectors was marshaled in the yard, a call for police was put through by Mrs. Anna M. C. Tillinghast, immigration commissioner.

POLICE ARE CALLED

Two patrolmen were rushed to the scene from East Boston station but made no effort to disperse the gathering. They took up posts outside the gates and apparently awaited for orders. A detail of reserves was held at the station.

The demonstration started shortly after word had been received from Washington, that Ann Berlak would be released on $5000 bail pending a preliminary hearing on the deportation proceedings tomorrow morning.

The sympathizers, many of whom were from the Rhode Island strike zone, arrived in buses and immediately started their demonstration.

HEARING TOMORROW

At the start of the demonstration there were some 50 or 60 participants, but the number grew steadily as members of the National Textile Union arrived.

A short time previously Commissioner Tillinghast had announced that Ann Berlak would be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow morning.

In Pawtucket 50 workers returned to the Royal Weaving Plant, despite peaceful picketing which was carried on at some distance from the mill.

Police broke up a meeting of strike sympathizers near the plant of the weaving company. About 60 persons were being addressed by an agitator. They offered no resistance.

The chief event in the strike zone was the withdrawal of State troopers after officials of Central Falls had announced their ability to handle the situation.

GERMAN AID IS PLANNED IN PARIS

Stimson Takes Part in Conference Before the "Big 7" Meet in London

London, July 16 (AP) — Developments in the perilous situation arising from Germany's financial crisis are succeeding one another with a rapidity unusual in international diplomacy.

It is explained in authoritative circles that Germany's situation is regarded as so serious that immediate and drastic action by all the nations concerned is imperative.

AID PLANNED IN PARIS

Tentative plans for extending financial assistance to Germany under some form of international supervision were worked out today at a meeting attended by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and representatives of France and Great Britain, says a Paris dispatch.

The idea, it is understood, is that supervision would be by an international committee with prerogatives similar to those of the supervisory committee that operated under the Dawes plan. The whole scheme was presented to the French cabinet this afternoon.

Mr. Stimson, it was said, made it clear the United States cannot participate further in German relief

Mrs. Augusta P. Sills, 35, attractive wife of a wealthy Brookline man and mother of two children, drowned herself in Charles river, near the Harvard bridge, today.

Police recovered her body 10 minutes after she jumped from the float but she was beyond aid when she arrived at Beth Israel Hospital where an attempt at resuscitation was made with a pulmotor.

WORRIED BY ILLNESS

They spent the night together at a Back Bay hotel and after his departure for the office this morning she evidently walked to the river.

She had been in ill health for some time and under the care of a physician. From her mother, at Springfield, yesterday, she received a telegram advising her to get in touch with the doctor as tests showed she had a symptom of diabetes.

The news is believed to have preyed upon her mind.

Before drowning herself the woman placed her handbag and wide-brimmed straw hat carefully on the float and in the bag police found articles which gave the first clues to her identity.

FLIERS DOWN 12 MI. FROM GOAL

Budapest, July 16 (INS)—The first transatlantic flight in history prompted solely by patriotism ended within 12 miles of its goal this evening, when Captains George Endres and Alexander Magyar were forced down at Biscke, near here, after a non-stop jump from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

The flight ended at 7:25 p. m. (2:25 p. m., E. D. T.), 26 hours and 7 minutes after the airmen took off from Harbor Grace. The airman covered approximately 2300 miles.

The descent was necessitated by shortage of fuel. The landing gear of the plane "Justice for Hungary" was broken, but the fliers escaped injury.

The airmen philosophically made the best of the situation and went on to the capital by motor car to receive the enthusiastic accolade awaiting them.

TRAFFIC BOARD HITS HULTMAN

The traffic commission, with Chairman Joseph A. Conry providing the spark, "put the blast" on Police Commissioner Hultman today.

Conry said able-bodied policemen were doing "lady's work" at police headquarters while the commissioner failed to provide enough officers to prosecute violators of downtown parking regulations.

The commission demanded from Hultman the facts regarding a car allegedly tagged 22 times for parking in Winter st., since Jan. 1, with not a single resulting prosecution.

Traffic Commissioner Conry, William P. Long and Thomas J. Hurley held a meeting. Commissioner Hultman was not present. After the meeting Conry issued the following prepared statement:

"A letter was read from the general manager of the Boston & Maine railroad complaining that

Guard Is Removed in 2nd Jail Escape

Worcester, July 16 (AP)—Discovery of the name of a jail guard among personal effects of William F. Miller, missing bank crook, and evidence of dissension in the ranks of Worcester county jail employes presented new developments today as Sheriff Richardson continued efforts to place responsibility for the second double escape this week.

The sheriff removed a guard whose name was found in Miller's note book, but did not divulge his name. The scope of Miller's activities was revealed in reports that warrants list 2900 specific complaints against him.

To Wed? Constance Can't Say Just When

New York, July 16 (INS)—Constance Bennett and the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudrais are here. Mrs. Richard Bennett, Connie's mother, was at the station to meet her.

"Are you going to marry the marquis?" a reporter asked.

"It would be very bad taste to say anything about that now," said the beautiful movie star. "The marquis has not got his divorce."

NATION DYING TO TUNE OF DEBTS, ISMS

Citizens in Desperation Turn to Anarchy or War as Welcome Relief From Misery

(Editor's note: The following resume of the grave economic situation in Germany, now focusing the attention of the entire world, was cabled to International News Service today by Otto D. Tolischus, for many years correspondent in Berlin and now stationed in London as general manager of all European news services of International News Service.)

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS

(Copyright 1931 by International News Service.)

London, July 16—Germany, like a giant balloon first inflated by $4,000,000,000 in foreign loans extended for the purpose of helping lift the world to the heights of prosperity and then deflated by the flight of foreign and domestic capital, is now sinking into the sea of world depression. Sixty million panic-stricken people are struggling with one another and everybody else to save themselves from drowning under the collapsing national social envelope.

PUBLIC DESPERATE

In the struggle, millions of Germans are embracing Communism, Fascism, Socialism, Militarism and other "isms" previously unheard of. Overhanging all is the spectre of anarchy, chaos, civil and even foreign war threatening to engulf all Europe.

The most serious aspect of all is the realization of desperation. On my recent frequent visits to Berlin and other German cities I found the mass in the street contemplating the prospect that Bolshevism and even the war theory would be better than conditions today.

Already rival private armies are trooping through the country. Rival uniforms dominate the scene, with the stage set for civil war. Government police during many authorities are fully prepared to cope with disorders and possible "putsches" aimed at overthrow of the existing regime.

HINDENBURG TOTTERS

Only the towering figure of the octogenarian President Von Hindenburg is able to command comparative order, and events are pushing him to possible resignation.

Causes of the existing crisis may be summed up briefly as follows:

2—German Socialism.

3—The fight of German propertied classes, surviving elements of the old regime, against both of the foregoing.

Germany was partly pushed and partly jumped headlong into the crisis. She has gone through a spending spree unprecedented in the history of nations. It is a wonder she has lasted so long.

Government expenditures in Germany rose from $1,750,000,000 annually before the war to more than $5,000,000,000 and increased another $1,500,000,000 during the last five years.

Part of the spending was imposed by the war victors, who on the principle that "the boche pays all" dreamed of collecting $33,000,000,000 or half of Germany's entire pre-war wealth in "reparations," though the actual war damage to the civilian population of the allies was only $7,000,000,000.

DISASTER NEAR

Predictions of disaster from this policy by Keynes and other sober economists are now coming true. Though little is actually credited to her, Germany has paid the victors so far, according to conservative British and American estimates, much more than $12,000,000,000, besides the loss of her colonies and domestic territories, not counting her own war costs.

This is more than the total of combined allied debts to the United States at the end of the war, which were reduced on the plea of inability to pay. It compares with the $340,000,000 in French reparations at the end of the destructive Napoleonic wars and the $1,000,000,000 assessed at the end of the Franco-Russian war in 1871.

SOCIALISTS FAIL

Added to the enforced foreign payments was the wild domestic spending by German socialism, which mastered the principle of division of distribution but forgot production. Russian bolshevism, following a spree of division, is painfully learning the rudiments of production, surpassing the worst early phases of capitalism in the "exploitation" of labor.

Unable to agree on dispositions of the German propertied classes, the victors at Versailles put in power the Socialists, who made the government coffers a general grab-bag until the practice spread to industry and agriculture. Today only the unlucky or unskilled are still unsubsidized.

Borrowed money, requiring a high rate of interest, was sunk into unproductive but luxurious playgrounds, stadiums, swimming pools, opera houses, and palatial office buildings.

The world depression and the drop in commodity prices brought the creeping crisis to a head.

Mussolini's government, replying to the Pope's encyclical, criticising Fascism and its efforts to take the education of children from the Catholic Church, calls that encyclical "a collection of lies."

However, in Rome, as farther north, "sticks and stones may break my bones but hard words cannot harm me."

It is understood that Italy will organize a great parade of the Fascist party, to show its power; 873,000 adults, and 640,000 youths are to be mobilized on the battlefields of northern Italy.

Even that will not dismay the Pope, whose strength is in spiritual force and physical weakness. The smallness of the Vatican territory, protected only by a handful of Swiss guards, and others, would make any sort of violence preposterous.

The Rev. Mr. Sandifer, of Louisiana, Baptist, holds the long distance preaching championship, with a sermon lasting 58½ hours.

It was a commendable performance, the reverend gentleman keeping up his strength with raw eggs, chocolate and coffee, and changing his stiff shirt once during the sermon.

At the same time, the Sermon on the Mount, read with conviction in three minutes, might produce more effect than the longest preaching.

Won't That Poor Girl EVER Get a Break?

IN these bootleg days it is "Yo Ho Ho, and several MILLION bottles of rum, also gin, brandy, wood alcohol, varnish and hair tonic."

* * *

But—

The hero, sitting on the little craft, is what scientists call "Homo Boobus," and yet there is logic in his remark. How can he save anybody unless somebody saves him?

And we are all so busy now saving Germany, Mesopotamia, Austria, Beluchistan, Timbuctoo, and points East.

* * *

However, we can hope for the best. That's in the Constitution.

That battleship in the distance looks hopeful. But don't rely on it.

Before you can get thirty-six States to vote to take Prohibition out of the Constitution, and it can't come out unless they DO vote, you will have whiskers longer than the Seven Sutherland Sisters' hair.

GEM ROBBERS' GUN FOUND

A sawed-off "baby" shotgun and a revolver and shell were found today concealed in a bed in the room occupied at the Copley-Plaza hotel yesterday by two bandits who robbed Saul Lenkowsky, 33, New York gem salesman, of $150,000 in diamonds.

A ball of twine was also found. The weapons and twine are believed to have been those used by the bandit pair to bind up Lenkowsky in his room at the hotel and bind him.

The pair who occupied the room have been missing since the robbery.

The find was made by Special Officers Mark Morrison and William A. Philbrick while Lenkowsky was being questioned by Deputy Supt. McDevitt regarding the robbery.

ROOM HAD BEEN SEARCHED

This room previously had been searched by Sergt. Warren Lisen, who has been rated as one of the best detectives in the country.

Sergt. Lisen went to Philadelphia last night on the trail of the bandit pair who are believed to have come to Boston from that city.

Police here have communicated with Chicago police regarding the holdup man. They were registered at the Copley-Plaza under a Chicago address and, although it is believed fictitious, it is being checked.

The robbery occurred shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday afternoon.

At Frankfort-on-the-Main, 160 European watchmakers are showing their wares. There is a sun dial, 3500 years old, from Egypt, and a modern German watch that clips the seconds into tenths. Germans expect to sell that in the United States, where everybody is in a hurry, especially those that have nothing particular to do, on their way from Newport to Palm Beach.

It is too bad that a nation with ability to create such a watch should burn its young men, and its civilization in war.

Mr. Baker, distinguished American engineer, who has been in Russia, building steel plants, and knows more than those that have been here, forming theories, says Russia is doing well, will not compete disastrously with other nations, because she can't manufacture too much for her own use, and will not fail in her industrial undertaking.

* * *

And Mr. Stone, head of the farm board, foresees a time when small private farmers will disappear. He says the trend of agriculture is toward "cooperatives." There seems to be a Russian sound to that. Millions of Russian farmers are engaged in co-operative farming, under government direction. The government has planted, under the direction of an expert American farmer, from Montana, one batch of wheat that would make a strip 15 miles wide, reaching from San Francisco to New York city.

CREDIT UNION'S LOSS COVERED

The 726 shareholders in the South End Credit Union at 377 Harrison ave. will not suffer any loss as a result of the $38,000 shortage in the accounts of that organization.

This announcement was made today by Morris Goodman of 21 Milk st., chairman of the liquidating committee, who said the shortage is well protected by a bond.

Goodman, who is a member of the board of directors, is a public accountant. The Union, a private mutual benefit enterprise, has been in existence since July 24, 1921. The shortage had been cleverly concealed since 1929 by a double card system. An official of the organization is under examination.

FIVE FLEE FIRE IN SOMERVILLE

Five persons were driven to the street, trolley service was disrupted and damage estimated at $2500 caused when fire swept a two-family house owned by John W. Scott, on Whipple st., West Somerville, today.

Firemen, summoned on alarms from two different boxes, found the flames eating their way through the roof, and threatening to spread to other houses in the neighborhood.

Several children playing with matches on a bulkhead in the rear of the house are believed to be the cause of the fire. Trolley service on Highland ave. was halted when lines of hose were laid across the tracks.

While visiting a girl friend at 1257 Tremont st., Roxbury, Dennis B. Letteney, 26, of South st., Waltham, was attacked by two armed youths, who robbed him of $25, then fled in Letteney's borrowed machine.

Letteney told police that he had just bade his friend good-bye in her apartment and was walking down the hallway when the two youths accosted him.

LONDON CALLS MEETING OF 7 NATIONS

Premier Laval, Aristide Briand, French foreign minister; Henry L. Stimson, American Secretary of State; American Ambassador Edge, Arthus Henderson, British foreign secretary, and Lord Tyrell, British ambassador, took part in today's discussion.

U. S. PARTICIPATION HAILED.

Prime Minister MacDonald of England cancelled a visit to Berlin which he was to have made tomorrow and will remain in London for a meeting on Monday of representatives of the principal world powers.

This meeting, the greatest of nations' leaders since the World War, may supersede that of the Young plan experts who were to have gathered to dovetail that plan with the Hoover moratorium.

Foreign Minister Henderson also has cancelled his trip from Paris to Berlin, where he was to join Premier MacDonald in conference with the German leaders. A statement from Paris announcing Henderson's decision said:

"There has developed action of international solidarity to achieve assistance for Germany. For the first time in long years the United States is represented officially in negotiations of particular interest to Europe. It is unnecessary to emphasize the importance of that fact."

It was decided late today at a cabinet meeting in Berlin that Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius will go to Paris tomorrow to confer with representatives of France, Great Britain and the United States before going to London for Monday's international conference.

Premier MacDonald informed the House of Commons today of the change in plans.

Edward Marjoribanks, Conservative, asked if Mr. MacDonald would "give an assurance that the government will be no party to the imposition of political conditions exploiting the financial crisis."

"I shall take note of that question," was the Premier's reply.

GERMAN BANKS REOPEN

In Berlin, the banks which were closed two days ago by government decree reopened to meet the mid-month payroll. There were no disorders.

In Istanbul, Turkey, the German financial crisis has caused a run on German banks, the public drawing out 2,500,000 Turkish liras (nominally about $15,000,000) the last few days.

The government of Latvia ordered all banks today to restrict payments to 5 per cent if depositors asked for more than $40.

At the great conference here Monday besides Premier MacDonald and Foreign Minister Henderson of Great Britain will be Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany, Secretary Stinson of the United States, Dino Grandi for Italy, Premier Rankin and Foreign Minister Hyams of Belgium and Ambassador Matsudaira, representing Japan.

Stimson Ordered to London by Hoover

Washington, July 16 (AP)—President Hoover today instructed Secretary Stimson to proceed to London and represent the United States at the meeting of heads of governments Monday.

The order was communicated by transatlantic telephone from the White House to the American embassy in Paris by Acting Secretary Castle of the State Department.

RATE INCREASE IS ESSENTIAL, SAYS PELLEY

New Haven Head Says Roads Must Be Tided Over the Depression Period

Washington, July 16 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission was told today that the Eastern railroads believed only the 15 per cent increase in freight rates sought by the carriers would be necessary to tide them over the depression period.

The statement was made at the second day of hearings on the rate application by J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, representing eastern carriers.

He testified the increase was not sought with an idea to bringing profits to the 5½ per cent net return fixed as "fair" by the commission.

It was asked, he said, because it was felt that without additional revenues the railroads could not continue the transportation service "which it is their duty under the law to provide and which is essential to the public welfare."

Pelley said railroad earnings were such that the carriers were unable to maintain their normal capital and maintenance expenditures.

"The curtailment of the purchasing power of the railroads has, in my judgment," he continued, "a strong influence in retarding the recovery of business."

HOOVER LAUDS IDEALS OF C. E.

Washington, July 16 (AP)—National independence and international understanding were portrayed today as "not incompatible" elements by President Hoover in greeting delegates of the International Christian Endeavor Societies.

Speaking over the radio from the cabinet room of the White House to the 50th anniversary convention of the societies in San Francisco, the Chief Executive said the organization was "a world force for the promotion of spiritual advancement among our people, for stable international good will and world peace."

Speed on Vet Hospitals

Washington, July 16 (INS)—Speeding up its work to provide employment during the depression, the veterans' administration will complete a $20,500,000 hospital program a year and a half ahead of schedule.

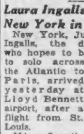
Laura Ingalls Reaches New York in Flight

New York, July 16 (US)—Laura Ingalls, the diminutive aviatrix who hopped in the first woman to solo across the Atlantic to Paris, arrived yesterday at Lloyd Bennett airport, after a flight from St. Louis.

Miss Ingalls appeared tired. When she signed the reception book at the field she left a blank after the name marked for "destination." She smiled as she said:



Miss Ingalls

"I can't say anything definite. I may be here a week and I may be here a month. "I am contemplating a hop direct to Paris as soon as good a place to land as any. That's about how it shapes up now."

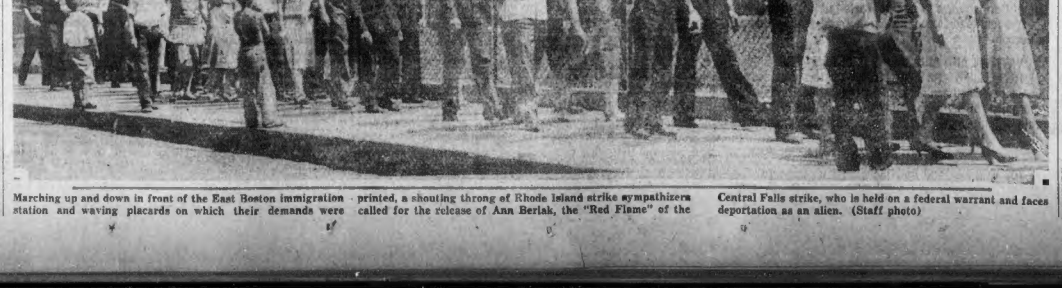
Van Loan Must Pay Wife, or Go to Jail

Los Angeles, July 16 (AP)—H. H. Van Loan, motion picture writer, was ordered by Superior Judge Dudley Valentine yesterday to pay $200 alimony to Mrs. Gertrude Van Loan today, or go to jail.

H. H. Van Loan

Mrs. Van Loan, whose contested divorce suit is pending, claimed Van Loan is $6175 in arrears in his alimony payments of $175 a month. Van Loan testified he is jobless since January and had been living on money borrowed from Marjorie Rambeau, actress.

'Red Flame' Parade Staged in Front of East Boston Immigration Station



Marching up and down in front of the East Boston immigration station and waving placards on which their demands were printed, a shouting throng of Rhode Island strike sympathizers called for the release of Ann Berlak, the "Red Flame" of the Central Falls strike, who is held on a federal warrant and faces deportation as an alien. CHILE ORDERS MORATORIUM

Santiago, Chile, July 16 (AP)—The world depression and disorganized markets for minerals and nitrates took their long-expected toll in Chile today when Premier Blanquier announced a moratorium on the foreign debt at least until Aug. 1.

In two statements by the premier, two days after he assumed office, and one by the Banco Central it was announced that for the balance of July, interest and service charges on foreign obligations, estimated to aggregate $2,040,000, would be deposited locally instead of being sent abroad and that after Aug 1 a decision would be made as to future payments.

The action affects thousands of holders of Chilean bonds, mainly in the United States and England, who must await temporarily the payment of interest. Whether the suspension of payment will continue after August 1 depends entirely on local and world economic conditions.

Boy Bleeds to Death

Randolph, July 16—Amilio Farraro, 10, bled to death in the Brockton hospital from cuts on the upper legs and abdomen, received when he fell from a barn loft onto a storm window in the barn of Mrs. Antonio Sasa, a neighbor.

EX-WIFE TERMS KISSES 'FRIENDLY' THEN LOVE SUIT IS SETTLED

WHAT A MAN! COOK, MAID, HOSTLER!

Royalty Is Going to Jazz Before King George at British Court Ball

Minnie Kennedy Hudson, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, seems to have the ideal husband, and this despite the fact that two other women are claiming George Edward "What a Man" Hudson as their own husband. It's breakfast in bed for Aimee's mother now, with her husband playing the role of cook and maid. Then with the food question out of the way he saddles a horse for his bride and away she goes for a ride over mountain trails. What a man for any woman! (International photo.)

MELROSE MAN ENDS $20,000 BALM ACTION

Settlement Terms Not Public; Mrs. Hartford Says Ex-Husband Termed Reed 'Sucker'

A settlement today ended the $20,000 alienation suit brought by George Hartford, middle-aged Nantasket showman, against George R. Reed, Melrose accountant, over the affections of Hartford's pretty young wife, Evelyn. No announcement of terms was made.

Following a day and a half of testimony, the litigants and their attorneys retired to the chambers of Judge Webster Thayer in Suffolk Superior Court.

Two and a half hours later Judge Thayer emerged, summoned the jury and said:

"You will not be called upon to consider this case. It has been disposed of. I hope the evidence you have heard may be of some use to you in your daily life."

FRIENDLY KISSES DEFENDED

Mrs. Hartford and her mother, on the stand earlier in the day, defended the lavishly bestowed kisses of Reed as "purely friendly"—the privilege of a close friend of the family.

Mrs. Hartford, who yesterday heard her 7-year-old son William describe compromising situations in which he found his mother and Reed, admitted under questioning by Elias F. Shamon, Hartford's attorney, that Reed had kissed her several times.

"No, I never kissed Mr. Reed," she said, "but he did kiss me several times—purely friendly kisses."

"Evidently he did not regard them as friendly kisses," Shamon said. "Otherwise, how do you account for these letters?"

Here he introduced several letters he said had been written by Reed to the pretty divorcee.

"I do not doubt your love for me. My faith is pinned to you," one of the letters said.

Mrs. Doucette followed her daughter to the stand, and declared that Reed, as a time-honored friend of the Doucette family, often kissed "all of us."

Earlier in the day Mrs. Hartford declared that the imminent arrival of a second baby in the Hartford family had alienated her husband from her.

"Our troubles date back to December of 1924," she declared. "I told him we were to have another baby and he was furious. "Then, in 1926, he stopped supporting me and the babies.

"In 1925 he brought this suit against Mr. Reed. I met my husband in 1930 and he told me Reed was a sucker—that he would soon have his car, his home and all his money."

'FRIENDLY KISSES' ONLY N LOVE SUIT

GEORGE HARTFORD

Mrs. Evelyn Hartford, pretty divorcee, termed the kisses of George R. Reed, Melrose accountant, as "friendly ones" in Suffolk Superior Court, where Reed was being sued for $20,000 by Mrs. Hartford's ex-husband. The action was settled out of court. The terms of settlement were not made public. These pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Hartford were taken in an anteroom at the courthouse today.

WALES TO HAVE WALTZES WITH QUEEN MOTHER

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Correspondent

London, July 16—Fox-trots, tangoes and waltzes will be danced in Buckingham Palace tonight, where for the first time since 1924 King George and Queen Mary of England are giving a court ball in the famous state ballroom.

But King George will be present only in the role of spectator. He is not fond of dancing, and rarely takes the floor. The ball was the Queen's idea. Her Majesty, according to circles close to the court, thought it fitting to revive one of the old-time court balls at the close of the most crowded royal season since pre-war days.

WEAR PLAIN DRESSES

At the same time the function will be in the nature of a special entertainment for Lady May Cambridge, the pretty daughter of Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, who returned to London from South Africa last May. She is twenty-five and unmarried.

Although the ball is taking place in the magnificent state ballroom, on the first floor of the palace, with its imposing scarlet decorations, and its walls of white and gold, it will be in no sense a state ball.

Queen Mary has decided it shall be a plain dress function. Male guests will wear ordinary evening dress with knee breeches, and women ordinary dance gowns, without any of the elaborate headdresses and trains which are worn at courts. A general order has gone out, however, that all guests will be expected to wear white kid gloves.

PRINCE TO DANCE

Champagne, claret, and hock cup, coffee and lemonade, with sandwiches of caviare, pate-de-foie-gras, and breast of chicken will be among the refreshments at the supper buffet.

It was learned the Queen will not dance any of the modern steps, but will take a partner for several of the waltzes. It was expected the Prince of Wales would partner his stately mother in the waltzes.

Despite repeated denials, morning newspapers and most of the general public continued to express belief that tonight's ball will be made the occasion for an interesting announcement affecting the future of some member of the royal circle.

In well-informed circles, however, it was believed any announcement would centre around Lady May Cambridge.

HINT ROYAL MATCH

It was pointed out that Lady May and the unmarried male members of the royal family are first cousins, but although it is known the present reigning house frowns on marriages between blood relations a marriage between Lady May and either Prince George or the Duke of Gloucester would not set a precedent.

In some quarters it was felt the "interesting announcement" may concern Princess Ingrid of Sweden, whom rumor has linked with the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester, and Prince George.

6 HURT IN CRASH AT WALTHAM

Francis L. Coolidge, 2d, of Concord, a social registerite and member of one of New England's oldest families, is in serious condition in Waltham Hospital as a result of a collision of his car and another in Banks sq., Waltham, early today. He is suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Five persons in the other car were cut and bruised and were held at the hospital for treatment. They are Harry J. McWhirk, of 7 Richards ter., Dorchester; his wife; Arthur McDonald, of 46 Stockton st., Creighton; H. Maker, of 3 Parkman st., and Miss Emily Lucas, of 26 Torrey st., both of Dorchester.

Witnesses reported that Coolidge's car overturned, throwing him about 50 feet. The car burst into flames.

THE REST OF THE NEWS

Stamford, Ct., July 16 (INS)—Because they were suspicious of a truck apparently laden with bedsprings and mattresses, police today had 700 gallons of alcohol on hand.

Hartford, Ct., July 16 (INS)—Conecticut has 135 firms engaged in manufacture of airplanes or their mechanism, according to the State Chamber of Commerce. Twenty-three towns have such plants, with Hartford possessing 25.

Paris, July 16 (INS)—Frank B. Kellogg, former American Secretary of State, was in Paris today en route to The Hague.

Washington, July 16 (INS)—Washingtonians will make the trip to Chicago in 3 hours and 55 minutes' flying time when the Continental Airways starts planes flying in and out of this city tomorrow.

GIRL FREED IN RUM RAID CASE

For five days a member of the new liquor squad drank with Samuel McCall of Athens st., South Boston, before causing the arrest of his daughter and son-in-law, it was testified in South Boston court today.

His son-in-law, Michael Trincolotta, 20, and his daughter, Alice, 19, of Sixth st., were arrested on charges of illegal sale following a raid by the new squad led by Sergt. William Harrow.

McCall told Judge Logan that Patrolman Carney, while drinking with him, partook of some of Trincolotta's liquor.

BRIDE TO JOIN RUDY AT BIER

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE,
Boston Evening American Correspondent.

Westbrook, Me., July 16—There will be no "Heigh ho, everybody!" on the air tonight.

At the hour when Rudy Vallee ordinarily greets 1,000,000 radio fans he will go tonight to Portland to meet his bride, en route today from New York to attend the funeral of her husband's "perfect mother."

TRIBUTES POUR IN

Torn by grief at his mother's death, the radio star has the additional burden of worry over the health of his bride, whose illness prevented her from accompanying him home last Monday.

He will meet her at Portland with a detail of motorcycle police who will escort them to Westbrook.

A veritable avalanche of telegraphed condolences and a bountiful of floral tributes poured in today on the Vallee home where yesterday Mrs. Katherine Vallee, 61, died after a long illness. The telegrams were brought from Portland by a small army of messenger boys. Flowers came by telegraph order from all sections of the country.

MANY MESSAGES SENT.

Among those from whom messages and flowers were received were Governor Gardiner, Sheriff Floyd Jordan, Floyd Gibbons, George White, American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Irving Caesar, Sam Fox, the staff of WEEI at Boston, John L. Clark of WBZ, Dave Rubinoff, Paramount Theater staff, Rudy Wiedoft, Little Jack Little, Phil Ponce, Gene Buck, and a host of others.

Jack Hurd of Elizabeth, N. J., a close friend of Rudy, has offered to drive him and his wife back to New York after St. Hyacinth's cemetery receives the body of Mrs. Vallee.

WCSH will be off the air for one minute at the start of the funeral service.

Mrs. Vallee is to be buried tomorrow from St. Mary's Church, Father William J. Culbert, from whom she received the last rites of the church, will officiate at a solemn high requiem mass.

Friends and neighbors will serve as pall bearers. They are John Murphy, mail carrier; Grover Welch, lawyer; Hormidas La Fond, merchant; Harry Belyea, announcer over Station WCSH; Ralph Cousins, a neighbor, and Wade L. Bridgham, lawyer.

2 WOMEN WANT AIMEE'S DAD

Los Angeles, July 16—Search was under way today for "What-a-Man" Hudson, ideal lover and new husband of "Mother" Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, famous evangelist.

For, just as "What-A-Man" and his moonlight bride disappeared last night, the groom suddenly became the center of attraction for at least two other women.

Shortly after "Ma" and her happy mate closed their honeymoon villa at Hermosa Beach and departed to become "vagabond lovers on wheels," the two women exhibited great curiosity in Hudson's photographs and voiced a desire to talk to "Ma."

One of the women is Mrs. Guy E. Hudson of this city.

The other is known as Mrs. Guy Edward Hudson, and resides near Denver, Col.

The Los Angeles Mrs. Hudson is the former Mrs. Margaret Newton, a comely widow, who exhibited a duly recorded marriage license, showing her and Guy E. Hudson, a resident of Salt Lake City, were married in Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 22, 1929

She identified photographs of Hudson as bearing a remarkable resemblance to her missing husband, and related several past experiences, which seemed to coincide with those mentioned by the Colorado woman.

"Of course, it is possible that Hudson has obtained a divorce or annulment of our marriage, but if this is the case I have never been apprised of the fact," she said.

Robbers Escape, but Leave $3600 in Safe

The arrival of Frank A. Abbot, night watchman of the Hotel and Railroad News building at 19 Read st., early today caused four armed robbers to miss $3600 in the safe on the second floor and flee from the building.

Abbot grew suspicious when he saw lights in the building and started to investigate. He was met by two armed men who, he said, told him to "beat it." On leaving the building he noticed two other armed men join the pair, and they all made their escape through a rear exit, he said.

Davidson Sentenced on Check Charges

John K. Davidson of New York was sentenced to nine months in jail by Judge Thomas H. Dowd in Municipal Court today on three charges of passing worthless checks. He appealed and was held in $1000. Davidson was arrested July 9 after he tried to cash a $90 check with Samuel Meyers, a Dorchester tax driver.

1 DEAD, 2 HURT AS AUTO SKIDS

Whitinsville, July 16 (INS)—Carlson A. Bronson, 35, chairman of the board of assessors of Northbridge, was dead today, following an accident in which the automobile he was driving, according to police, skidded on the slippery pavement near Adams Four Corners, struck a large boulder and overturned.

Two other occupants of the automobile, Roy R. Rollins, 38, Whitinsville town auditor, and William D. Veau, 27, also of this town, were slightly bruised and cut. Both were taken to Whitinsville Hospital for treatment and were discharged today.

Lawrence, Andover Demand New Road

The State department of public works was urged today by a large delegation of city and town officials and residents of Lawrence and Andover to include in its road construction program this year a three-mile stretch of highway running from North Reading to Andover, so as to bring back the transient trade to merchants in Andover and South Lawrence.

Many of the speakers expressed the opinion the recent construction of the by-pass at North Reading, diverting traffic in the direction of North Andover, had done much harm to the merchants.

NATION MOURNS WITH RUDY OVER LOSS OF MOTHER

WILBUR WOLF MARIE POWERS LOUISE CURRIE

traffic congestion in front of the Boston & Maine railroad (apparently the North Station) was so badly handled last Saturday that many persons missed their train connections. The general manager wrote The whole trouble is due to lack of having sufficient officers on hand to take care of traffic.'

"It was voted that the communication be sent to the police commissioner with the request that appropriate action be taken to avoid such a situation in the future.

DETAILS DEMANDED.

"The statement of the police commissioner in the mayor's office recently that more than 50 per cent of the time of the police force was devoted to automobile and traffic regulations has been challenged by Commissioner Conry.

"He has sought without result to get from the police commissioner the details that will substantiate the statement made by the police commissioner. He has been unable to get the information and today the traffic commission voted that the police commissioner be requested to furnish the traffic commission with a statement in detail which would demonstrate the assertion . . .

"When the police commissioner confessed his inability to enforce traffic regulations he did not offer any specific reason.

"A car, repeatedly parked on Winter st. attracted the attention of investigators of the traffic commission. It was found that this car had been tagged 22 times since January 1 and no prosecutions.

PATROLMEN HUMILIATED.

"Commissioner Conry has tried to get a statement of all the facts in the matter, but the police commissioner has been obdurate.

"This morning the traffic commission voted that the police commissioner forward to the traffic commission a full report of the facts.

"Commissioner Conry is of the opinion that a large number of able-bodied patrolmen are humiliated by being compelled to do clerical work at police headquarters.

"This work could be better done by lady clerks and the patrolmen be given a man's work.

"The traffic commission today passed the following vote: That the Boston Traffic Commission request of the police commissioner a detailed statement of information as to the number of police, including patrolmen, sergeants, lieutenants and captains doing clerical work at headquarters."

PARTED BY TRAGIC DEATH

Mrs. Augusta P. Sills of Brookline, who committed suicide by leaping into Charles river today, and her husband, who identified her body at morgue. Her act was laid to worry over ill-health. She dived to death off a float near Harvard bridge.

DIVER TO COVER BATHING TRAP

Officials at the L st. bath house today started a diver at work to place a cover over a "hole" about 50 feet from the beach, a point where it is stated many near drownings occurred during the hot spell.

The hole was dug for the purpose of pumping salt water into the shower baths at the bath house. Planking was put in place on the sides, but no top. Bathers got into difficulties at the hole on several occasions.

The park department decided to put a cover over the top of the hole today in order to avoid any accident.

METER CHARGE BEFORE COURT

Mayor Curley, through Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, today filed a petition in Supreme Court asking a review of the Department of Public Utilities decision upholding the Boston Consolidated Gas Company's charge of 50 cents a month service charge in addition to gas charges.

The 50 cents a month rate the petitioners claim, is in violation of the provisions of Section 2, Chapter 316 of the Acts of 1927.

AIR COLLISION KILLS 4 FLIERS

San Antonio, Tex., July 16 (AP)—Three officers and one flying cadet were killed four miles south of Brooks Field today when the two planes in which they were flying collided in the air.

All four were duty at Brooks Field. They were Maj. Charles V. Hart, flight surgeon and pilot; Capt. Carlos J. Chamberlain of New York city; Lieut. K. Austin Rogers, flying instructor, and Cadet Enfiett Longacre.

The two planes, piloted by Maj. Hart and Lieut. Rogers, were flying at an altitude of 300 or 400 feet when they crashed in mid-air and plunged to the ground.

Chamberlain was in training to become a flight surgeon. He was a member of the New York National Guard.

Rogers was a flying instructor and was giving a lesson to Cadet Longacre, who was the son of Capt. Longacre of the quartermaster corps.

Man Tries Poison to Avoid Arrest

Sought for the second time on the charge of assault with intent to rob, Joseph T. Novaskofski, 21, of Freeport st., Dorchester, drank the contents of a bottle of disinfectant last night, it was learned today.

He was taken to City Hospital where it was said his condition was not serious.

Paving Cutters' Union Enjoined

Judge Stanley E. Qua in Superior Court today enjoined the officers of Branch 169 of the Paving Cutters Union from interfering with the business of Toon Bros. & Wilson, contractors.

The court appointed Maurice Tobey as master to hear the case.

Disbarment of Law Lecturer Sought

The disbarment of Henry W. Beal, Boston lawyer and lecturer at Boston University Law School, was asked today by the Boston Bar Association.

A petition by the association, filed in Suffolk Superior Court, accuses Beal of misappropriating and converting to his own use $3760 in securities belonging to the estate of Martin J. Shugrue, a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Beal, who lives in Brookline, was admitted to the bar in 1900.

Somerville Police Hold Up Police Badge

Somerville police today refused a special policeman's badge to Emil Beuton, 27, of West Somerville, a theater employe, on the ground that he is not a citizen of this country. Beuton had obtained official sanction from the board of aldermen to be appointed a special officer and Alderman Harry F. O'Connell, as chairman of the commission, had signed an order granting Beuton permission to be appointed.

with the name "Eugene" written on it.

Dr. Shubel, who was called to the morgue to aid identification, said the card was issued for an appointment for Eugene Sills, 12, son of Mrs. Sills. The other child is a daughter, Naomi, seven.

First word of the tragedy to reach police was a telephone call to the Back Bay station by a man who said an attractive woman had just leaped from the float.

Sergt. Harold Wilkins with Patrolmen Benham, Connelly, O'Donnell and O'Meara made a quick run to the scene in an ambulance and a man standing on the float pointed out the spot where he had seen the woman go down.

Sergt. Wilkins and Patrolman Benham obtained a boat and recovered the body 15 feet from the float, two feet below the surface. Ladder 26 firemen rushed a pulmotor to the hospital and heart stimulants were injected to no avail.

Month in Jail for Drunken Driver

Found guilty for the second time of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, Bernard J. Reardon, 29, of Andrew rd., South Boston, in Quincy court today was sentenced to one month in the House of Correction. He appealed. On a charge of drunkenness he was fined $15. Reardon was arrested when he failed to heed a go-ahead signal in Quincy.

DYING DOWAGER MAKES PEACE ON DEATHBED

Bar Harbor, Me., July 16 (AP)—Mrs. John B. Henderson, 90-year-old dowager of the fashionable 18th st. section of Washington, D. C., was critically ill here today.

No hope was held for her recovery and it was said that death might come at any time.

During the 18 days that she has been ill a reconciliation has been effected with her foster granddaughter, Mrs. Beatrice Van Rensselaer Henderson Wholean.

Last February Mrs. Henderson disinherited her and disclosed that she was a foundling adopted by her son and his wife.

Mrs. Henderson's action came as the result of a suit filed by Mrs. Wholean to block the elder woman's gift of the Henderson home to the Government as a mansion for the Vice-Presidents.

Mrs. Henderson is the widow of the late U. S. Senator John Brooks Henderson, of Missouri, who died in 1913.

Dentist Fined for Non-Registration

In connection with its campaign against Massachusetts dentists for non-payment of annual registration fee of $2 a year, the State Board of Dental Examiners today announced that Dr. Philip L. Farrell of Boston ave., Medford, had been fined $25 in Malden District Court today for failing to pay his fees for the past four years. Dr. Farrell appealed.

Dog Guards Body of Indian Suicide

Panama City, July 16 (AP)—Faithful unto death has been Sonito Mora's dog, Bonito, an old San Blas Indian, hanged himself from a tree on the old Espinosa trail. A small brown mongrel was on guard when police found the body. He led officers to his master's lodgings.

Reconciled

Mrs. Beatrice V. Henderson Wholean, foster granddaughter of Mrs. John B. Henderson, Washington dowager, who, disinherited some weeks ago, has become reconciled with Mrs. Henderson since the latter was stricken by illness at Bar Harbor, Me.

BANDIT GOT $11 IN HOLDUP

A hold-up man stopped George F. Willard, driver for a milk company, in Langdon st., Roxbury, about noon today, and robbed him of $11.

Willard told police that the gunman asked for a quart of milk, tendering a five-dollar bill. As Willard was making change, the gunman shoved a revolver in his face and demanded his money.

After warning Willard to be quiet, the gunman sped away in a car bearing Indiana number plates.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS WILL RELEASE WORLD TOUR TRAVELOGUE

Robert Williams to Play in 'Forbidden' Opposite Barbara Stanwyck

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, July 16—"Around the World With Doug" should bring even the most blase movie-ites into the theaters. That title is my suggestion for the four-reel travelogue now being edited by the capable Robert Sherwood for Douglas Fairbanks.

Louella O. Parsons

While the rest of the world is week-ending at the beaches, Douglas Fairbanks, Victor Fleming and the erudite Mr. Sherwood are burning the midnight oil, getting this fascinating number ready for release. Doug isn't trying to make a serious adventure film. He's got comedy aplenty. In fact, he and Victor Fleming are laughing at themselves and you know that always gets over with the fans. The film is an intimate account of the adventures of Doug and Vic in the Orient and elsewhere.

Hope I'll be invited to see the picture as soon as it's ready to be seen and then I'll tell you more about it.

* * *

I am wondering if Robert Williams is conceited. I have never known any member of the fair sex who didn't admit a sneaking liking for him. "Rebound" did it. It also did more for him. It put him on rather solid ground as a desirable leading man in Hollywood. Mr. Williams will emote opposite the popular Barbara Stanwyck in "Forbidden" at Columbia. Funny thing about little Stanwyck. There are only two ways in opinions about her. Her admirers are rabid and vice versa. Wonder if Dorothy Peterson has finished her contract at First National, or if she has only been borrowed by Harry Cohn, for she is in the cast also, with Frank Capra directing.

Warner Baxter and Edmund Lowe in Film

I can only hope that Warner Baxter will have a chance to twang the guitar in "The Silver City," the new adventures of the Cisco kid. How that boy did practice on the beach at Waikiki. He was like the Pied Piper of Hamelin, for a throng of youngsters would collect on the sand, wide-eyed in their admiration, following his every movement. Conchita Montenegro and Nora Lane will be the reason for the screen battles between Warner and Edmund Lowe in "The Silver City." Irving Cummings, as we said before, is the director. Eddie Lowe, of course you know, co-stars with Mr. Baxter in "The Silver City."

Seen and heard in passing: Estelle Taylor is green at the theater in company with the blonde Jean Harlow. Both gals, the blonde and the brunette, escorted by two strange young men. Much buzzing and craning of necks. Russell Barrymore Colt, a son of Ethel Barrymore and a nephew of John and Lionel, may soon be seen in the movies.

Estelle Taylor

He has the family classic profile and, moreover, the theatrical ability of the royal family. Loretta Young and Ricardo Cortez are the two latest to be reported "that way about each other." Elizabeth Muir has been added to the Hollywood Herald staff and she promises to furnish lively competition. Congratulations to the Herald. Smart move on her part.

Sitting at luncheon in the Brown Derby was Crane Wilbur with a new lady friend. "What's happened to Crane's wife, Beatrice Blinn?" I inquired. "Didn't you know that he and Beatrice are divorced and he is about to marry Lenita Lane, Paramount contract player?" The marriage won't take place until the Wilbur divorce is final and it is said to be Crane's sixth matrimonial venture. Crane is a pioneer in the film business and a gifted playwright. Up to now we haven't had any Nat Goodwins and DeWolf Hoppers in pictures. Perhaps Crane is trying to establish a record. He is here in the interests of his play, "On The Spot."

Like the poor the censors we always have with us. A message from Richmond says that the Virginia State Board of Censors has rejected in its entirety "Confessions of a Co-Ed." The reason announced is that the picture would have a harmful effect on co-educational institutions in the State. It was the theme of the picture, it was explained, that aroused the wrath of the three censors composed of Mrs. Emma Speed Sampson, A. C. L. Moncure and Edwin S. Reid.

* * *

To tell the truth I had forgotten all about Joseph McGillicuddy Hergesheimer. "Through the Window," until somebody brought to my attention that Vivian Osborne, New York stage actress, would emote for Joe and Martin Flavin, the other author. Looks as if Joe is going to get a break, what with Bill Boyd being put into the cast, also Sleet Gallagher and Juliette Compton. I wondered how come Vivian Osborne

George Barnard was no longer featured then I remembered George was hitting the trail for New York and would be pretty well tied up on "Rich Man's Folly."

A NURSE FINDS LOVE ON HER AFTERNOON OFF

Barbara Stanwyck, wearer of the cap and apron as she looks after the sick in the course of her career in "Night Nurse," which is held a second week at the Uptown and Olympia Theaters, is here seen enjoying herself on an afternoon-off. In the sands by the sounding sea she finds happiness in the arms of the film hero, Ben Lyon, who defies the law and other things to aid the cinematic story and foil the bold, bad men of the narrative. The lion-hearted Ben has his arms full when the plot thickens, and likewise again when he makes opportunity to woo the lady of his choice. So valiant a villain-chaser is he that the audiences go wild as he smashes store windows to get milk for a dying child, and they applaud uproariously when, through his cleverness, aiding the Sherlock Holmes mentality of the wise night nurse, the evil-doing Clark Gable and Ralf Harolds are thwarted in their conspiracy to slay a little girl.

Marion Davies Wins Fame as Hollywood's Perfect Hostess

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Out in Hollywood, Marion Davies is known as the perfect hostess. When she entertains, there's eager expectancy, and hope springs that this and that one will be invited. None in the movie colony has learned to conduct dinners or parties as well as she; her events ARE events.

* * *

This information of ours comes from numerous film folk we have talked with. One and all, they acclaim Miss Davies. We think Leatrice Joy phrased it best. Her comment was:

"Marion's gatherings are red-letter events. The minute we hear she is planning something, Hollywood goes on its toes. And society matrons fairly burn the wires they pull to be among those present."

Three titles the ace comedienne has among her co-stars and the lesser lights—the most popular person, the most generous to charities, and the best hostess. Women readers particularly will like to know some of Miss Davies' own ideas about her planning and carrying out her parties. First of all, she gives as a basic dictum, that the best way to entertain is NOT to try to entertain. Sounds paradoxical, but she explains:

"I find people have more fun if you leave them alone. Some people drift into bridge games. Others like to go out and play tennis or swim in the pool. Many enjoy just sitting around and talking. They try to disturb them by insisting they dance? They are bound to enjoy themselves if left alone to their own devices. If I am having a good time myself I can be pretty sure my guests are happy.

"That is why, perhaps, I enjoy having people around. I don't find it strenuous, because I make myself part of the party and don't keep worrying what to do with my guests. Let them entertain you!"

As to social standing and such things, Miss Davies declares she never thinks of her entertaining in terms of society. She goes on:

"I always invite people I believe have most in common and will find each other interesting. I never set out to entertain them in that sense of the word. I simply ask the folks I think will find entertainment in being together.

"Of course, it is true that most of my guests are connected with pictures in some way, but it does not follow, necessarily, that they be stars or even particularly well known. Many are little higher than the extra ranks. But they happen to be friends and are just as welcome as any others who may have been more fortunate. I don't believe the question of importance enters into my guest lists. There is, however, a sort of unwritten law that producers, stars, directors, writers, and so forth, do not 'talk shop' socially. Perhaps that lends them all and places them on the same footing.

"What do they talk about? Well, I must confess I like to talk about pictures and almost everyone who comes to the house seems similarly inclined, especially foreigners. They want to meet all the stars, watch how films are made and ask many questions about everything they ever heard or read about Hollywood. I always run a picture or two after dinner."

Miss Davies' newest photoplay, "Five and Ten," based on Fanny Hurst's novel, will be screened at Loew's State, beginning tomorrow.

Film Treat at Repertory

It was a real treat for fans who saw the good old "Way Down East" at the Repertory Theater yesterday. This D. W. Griffith masterpiece is now to be seen with sound effects and the original orchestration "frenzied" on the film. None of the charm of this epic of Yankeedom is lost, but is enhanced by the new mechanical and musical effects.

"Way Down East" will remain a the Repertory until the middle of next week and thence starts on its "farewell tour." The reception last evening demonstrated that the entertaining value of "Way Down East" still holds its own. Those principal players, Lillian Gish, Richard Barthelmess and Lowell Sherman are worth seeing.

It was a happy thought of the management to provide for this engagement "The Hi Holler Band," which plays in front of the theater.

Concert Program at Brookline Tonight

DRAWN CURTAIN ENDS MYSTERY OF 'IMAGE'

Chicago, July 16 (AP)—Someone in the home of Sam Genna, once notorious as the leader of a liquor gang, pulled down a shade last night and Chicago's six-day wonder —the image of a mother and her child—which appeared on the side of an apartment building in South Ashland ave., vanished while 20 000 spectators watched.

Genna's home is directly opposite the apartment building to which as many as 50,000 persons were attracted by the appearance of the figure on the wall.

An arc lamp some distance away had been throwing its beams upon a bay window in the Genna home. The window pane in turn had reflected the light upon the wall of the apartment, with a lace curtain adding a shadow that resulted in a somewhat dim resemblance of the Madonna and Child.

BEATEN WOMAN AWARDED $500

A row between two women in a State st. lawyer's office three years ago resulted today in verdicts totaling $500 for Miss Camilla A. Clearwater, one of the participants, who claimed she was beaten by Mrs. Alice Morse of Franklin.

According to Miss Clearwater, who lives in Huntington ave., Back Bay, Mrs. Morse entered the office of Atty. Edward M. Bennett, where Miss Clearwater was employed, and found her estranged husband there with the attorney.

A row ensued, Miss Clearwater said, during which Mrs. Morse struck her and threw her across a desk. Mrs. Morse also entered the office and attacked her a second time, Miss Clearwater said.

Mrs. Morse was fined $200 on each of two assault charges and $100 for an alleged attempt to persuade Atty. Bennett to discharge Miss Clearwater.

TWO FAMILIES ROUTED BY FIRE

Two families were routed from their beds and driven to the street early today by a fire which raged through the upper floor of a two-story brick dwelling in Columbus ave., Waltham.

Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Everett and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hitchcock, occupants of apartments on the first floor, were roused by neighbors who saw the flames as they broke through the roof.

Firemen fought the blaze for two hours, and succeeded in confining the damage to the upper floor. The damage was estimated at $300.

Hyman Weinstein, owner of the building and occupant of the second floor, and his family were away.

Mrs. McDonough Goes to Last Rest

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret L. McDonough, widow of the late Fire Chief Peter F. McDonough and mother of the late District Chief Edward L. McDonough, both of the Boston Fire Department, was held today with solemn requiem mass in St. Mary's Church, Charlestown.

The Rev. Andrew J. White was celebrant, the Rev. Ralph W. Farrell deacon, and the Rev. James J. Hamilton, subdeacon. Members of Engines 50, 9 and 32 of Charlestown were drawn up at attention as the funeral cortege passed on its way to St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Mechanical Lung May Save Sick Boy

Bridgeport, Ct., July 16 (INS)—Physicians at Englewood Hospital here struggled throughout the night to save the life of Arthur Ahern, a Milford boy, who is suffering from infantile paralysis.

A "mechanical lung," rushed here from White Plains, N. Y., under an escort of state police, was put into action to aid the boy after he had been under artificial respiration for four hours during the evening. Hope for the boy's recovery was today strong.

Detective E. C. Brown Dead

Montpelier, Vt., July 16 (AP)—Edwin C. Brown, 57, State detective, formerly connected with a Boston private detective agency, died today. Brown had been attached to the Attorney-General's office here for six years.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Resinol clears them away

"My complexion was very poor because of pimples and blackheads which covered my face and neck. I had been advised to try Resinol Soap and Ointment, but had tried so many other things without success I was disgusted with everything. However, a friend urged me to try a sample anyway. In three days' time the improvement was so great I could hardly believe it. I will always have a word of praise for Resinol." (Signed)—Pauline Bunch, 2514 Warren Ave., Dallas, Texas.

COLT HUNTS CLUES IN PASTOR'S STUDY

Police Commissioner Confident Solution of "Choir" Mystery Is Near if He Could but Grasp It

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

POWELL'S EYES narrowed angrily as he prepared to answer Colt's question as to what Mrs. Beageley was sewing.

"You still suspect her," he charged. "I don't know what she was sewing, Colt, but I do know that Elizabeth Curtainwood is one of the noblest women in this world. You have no right to suspect her. If she said she was sewing she spoke the truth."

Colt glumly shook his head.

At least she made an excellent choice in her lawyer," he commented. "Now, Colonel, while you are protecting the family from annoyance during their time of grief, you understand that I cannot take the police away from the house."

"Your legal right to keep them here is far from clear."

INTO THE STUDIO

"Granting everything you say, nevertheless, and looking at it from your viewpoint, there can be no objection to my prowling around in the church and Beasley's study, isn't that so?"

"None in the least," returned the lawyer. "You can look around in the church and study to your heart's content. It is a gloomy place, even on a hot summer afternoon—but go ahead."

Colt rose and I followed suit.

"There is," added Colonel Powell, "a little bridge crossing the narrow area between this house and the church. It leads directly into the minister's study. Come this way, I'll show it to you."

We passed down the silent corridor, and at a place behind the staircase we came to a door, which Colonel Powell opened with a key. Before us was a short, narrow passage like a miniature Bridge of Sighs.

"Just walk straight ahead," directed Powell, "and you will find a door at the other end of the bridge, opening directly into Beasley's study. I shan't go with you. Good luck!"

And with a smile, the attorney stood for a moment looking at us, and then the closing door blotted him from our sight.

Without a word, Colt led the way, with me at his heels, across the passage, opened the door at the farther end, and descended a short flight of steps. The room in which we found ourselves was small and square in shape, one window overlooking a small and rather neglected garden.

Most of the walls were hidden by old-fashioned mahogany bookcases with glass doors of small leaded panes. There was a roll-top desks of oak, glaringly unsuited to the duller tones of the built-in woodwork.

MORE NEWS

The desk was covered with stacks of papers, trays of unanswered correspondence, an accumulation of printed circulars, and a Book of Common Prayer. Stacked neatly in the center was a pile of unopened mail, the contents of which would never be read by the man whose address on the envelope still seemed to impart to him an illusion of persisting life.

At the doorway stood a tall Irish policeman, whom I recognized as Michael Mullins, a faithful Catholic, strangely out of place in this penetralium of a heretic sect. At the sight of the Police Commissioner, he stiffened, saluted, and reported:

"Mr. Colt, there's been a lady outside this morning and this afternoon who says she is the dead man's typewriter — been trying to get in. I made her stay out. But every once in a while she comes and raps on the door. She wants to get in and I won't let her."

"Her name is Hicks?"

"That's right!"

"Well, we won't let her come in for a moment. Is the sexton here?"

"He wants to come in, too," but I won't let him. He is out there with another gentleman, Mr. Chadwick is the name. He wants to come in too, but I won't let him come in either. I had me orders."

SCRUTINIZED ROOM

Standing in front of the desk, Colt now scrutinized the room, giving a brief study to each object of furniture—the pictures, the books, and the litter on the desk. All morning an expert from the department had searched the room, exhuming little that Colt considered useful; now the Commissioner had come to see for himself. One by one he glanced at the letters, the last mail of the murdered man. Then, with a glance of compunction at me, he deliberately opened and read them.

"Worthless," he announced with a little sigh, and crossing behind the desk, sat down.

Rapidly he was handling the papers heaped under a weight on the desk—the findings which the detective thought important enough for Colt to look at. They consisted of bills, receipts, invitations, marriage announcements.

Next, Thatcher Colt picked up from the gleanings of the search a handful of small photographs, several of Reverend Doctor Beazeley, and several of Evelyn Saunders. No one could mistake their purpose. They were those maligning miniatures which are made in musty little shops for the blank spaces on passports. Colt put them in his pocket, together with the poem.

"I'll study these at leisure," he remarked.

Rising, he walked around the study, halting thoughtfully before one picture after another. Briefly he lingered before a colored print showing a street in a French village with houses built of wood, quaint gables and dark archways, probably from some little town in Normandy. From that he passed to a replica of the great canvas that is in Dresden—the Sistine Madonna. Standing before this, Thatcher Colt smiled.

SIX FINGERS

"Yes. You have probably looked at it many times—at least a thousand. Millions of people have looked at it since it was first completed by Raphael. Yet very few have observed it."

"Observed what, chief?"

"What seems to be a strange mistake of the artist. What might be called a 'bull,' or at least a very singular blunder. Look at the hand of the Pope, St. Sixtus, in his surplice and cloth of gold chasuble, kneeling on the clouds, adoring Mother and Child. See the papal hand quite prominently in the foreground and pointing directly at you?"

"I see it—but what about it?"

"One, two, three, four, five—and six! Well, I'll be damned!"

As he was finishing the sentence Colt stalked across the room to pause before another photograph of a group of holiday makers. No doubt this was a picture of some autumnal picnic, for men and women were wearing coats and gloves.

Beazeley was there with his wife in the center. She was wearing a long coat of distinctive design and with fur at collar and sleeves' ends. But Colt ignored the clergyman and his wife while he looked intently at the opposite end of the photograph, his finger touching the face of a young girl under the glass.

(Copyrighted, 1931, by Covici-Friede Co.)

(Does the young girl in the photograph figure in the mystery? Read tomorrow's interesting instalment.)

St. Louis Woman Loses 20 Lbs. of Fat In 4 Weeks

Also Gained In Energy—So Happy Can't Help But Write Letter of Thanks—Read It

A half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast not only quickly gives you the trim, slender figure you've eagerly craved but also brings back a degree of health and beauty you haven't had since the first pounds of excess fat made their appearance — strength and energy you forgot existed refill your body—skin clears—you feel years younger and look it, too!

And here in a nutshell is the "why" of the amazing reducing and health-giving power of Kruschen:

Kruschen is a superb combination of SIX separate mineral salts which act on glands, nerves and body organs as do the salts at the famous and expensive Spas of Europe.

It keeps the body free from harmful acids and poisons and strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—thousands of women are amazed at the simplicity and common sense behind the Kruschen treatment and are more than overjoyed by the results. You can hasten the reducing action by going lighter on potatoes, pastry and fatty meats.

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I just can't help but let you know what Kruschen has done for me. I'm only 23 years old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment. It certainly is a great relief not to be fat and bulky."

Buy Kruschen TODAY. An 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks. Any leading druggist throughout the world can supply you—money back if not satisfied.

HOT DOGGY DAYS! IF THERE IS A COOL SPOT within 90 miles we haven't found it, and we can assure you it wasn't in Hamilton yesterday, where we went—against our best judgment—to attend the Christ Church Fair on the grounds of Mrs. George L. von L. Meyer's pink villa. This is an annual event and just as monotonous as the change of seasons.

* * *

Of course, to the villagers, who are the regular parishioners of this charming little English countryside shrine, there is an element of novelty in the varying costumes from year to year of the summer folk, but the folk themselves vary almost none. The children look a year older and the mothers a year younger—sometimes—and the men—those few who appear reluctantly—seem to have stood still.

* * *

A few old faces are missed and the new ones don't quite take their place, but on the whole the roster is about the same, thank you. Mrs. "Chilly" Ayer has charge of the arrangements, and we can remember the time she looked like Chilly's daughter, but she looks as though she had entered the fidgetty 40s now; Mrs. John B. Moulton of the white elephant—table, of course—did her yearly bit with the assistance of her daughter, Betty Hubbard.

MRS. RICHARD STORY

* *

Annual Fair a Hamilton Tradition

TIME WAS WHEN OUR LITTLE CHURCH FAIR WAS held on the grounds of the village green, but at those affairs before the war the rich were seldom seen. It rhymes! Big-hearted Mrs. Meyer had an expansion of the heart one year and invited the whole show up on her hilltop, and little by little in every way it has become more of a summer social event until now, dear public—in case you are interested, which you probably aren't—the papers "cover" it and cameras are clicking all over the lot—proving the power of the press.

* * *

THANKS TO MR. AND MRS. RAYARD TUCKERMAN and a few others, the minister manages to live through the winter until the next "fair." Some day maybe these same dressy folk may decide to attend divine worship and join in singing "When the Mists Have Rolled Away." The minister, by the way, William F. A. Brides, has had a large part in the popularity of these affairs and the general expansion of the activities of Christ Church, partly because of his personality and somewhat because he married well socially, in a dim sort of way. His wife, who was one of the Pollard girls, is the sister of Mrs. Alvan F. Sortwell, Mrs. Joseph Raymond and the late Mrs. Joseph F. Woods and to be attached to that menage just had to mean a climb to the top. They are all rejoicing at this moment over the birth of a little William, Jr.

Mrs. Hubbard

* * *

TO GET BACK TO THE FESTIVITIES, it had the appearance of a garden party and many beautiful ladies persuaded willing victims to part with their gold for simply lovely things. Mrs. Grafton Smith in unusual figured silk attended to toys and globes and Miss Edith Bohlen and Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge made a charming picture sauntering about from booth to booth.

* * *

Many Attend

LOOKING LIKE FLOWERS, Miss Jean Sears, Mrs. Richard Storey and Mrs. John L. Saltonstall arranged the flower table. Mrs. Saltonstall looking quite Kate Greenaway in chiffon dress and large leghorn. A charming group were Mrs. A. D. Paulton, Miss Abby Beveridge and Miss Fanny Moore—New Yorkers, and looked it.

* * *

BEATRICE PATTON—OF the Washington Pattons—was selling chances on the most amusing little greyhound with the most enormous ears, and Peggy Todd—what a pretty child she has grown to be—took many. Anne and Susan Means entered Gypsy in the pet show, as did Letitia Brown with Spinkey and Gwendolyn Livermore with Polks, and Josephine Murray entered a goat. With a string of beads so large they resembled a lei wreath, Miss Alicia Rodgers resembled a South Sea beauty, and her aunt, Mrs. von Meyer, was quite lovely in a summer side.

* * *

BEVERLY FARMS WAS well represented—in fact, we saw people from Manchester, Gloucester, Topsfield, Beverly, in fact, it was quite a North Shore occasion and we hope the returns expelled all depression.

* * *

ONE OF THE VERY SMART events of the past week was the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago at their estate, Hare Forest, for their daughter, Miss Bertha Palmer, and her fiance, Oakleigh Thorne Lewis, and Potter Palmer, 3d, and his fiancee, Miss Rose Saltonstall Movius. Miss Movius and Mr. Lewis are guests of the Palmers for the present. About 120 of the summer colony attended.

LEILA MAY STEVENS WEDS TODAY AT MANCHESTER

Society Leaders Flock to Hamilton Church Fair

MRS. A. D. PAULTON MISS ABBY BEVERIDGE MISS FANNY MOORE

MRS. A. D. PAULTON, Miss Abby Beveridge and Miss Fanny Moore left many willing dollars on the tables at the Christ Church Fair at Hamilton yesterday which was held on the beautiful estate of Mrs. George von L. Meyer. It was a social and financial success.

MISS ALICIA RODGERS MISS BEATRICE PATTON PEGGY TODD

MISS ALICIA RODGERS helped to make it a success. Miss Beatrice Patton of Washington and Boston sold chances on this amusing little dog with elephant ears, while Peggy Todd, daughter of the J. P. Todds of Manchester assisted her.

Leila Stevens Weds Today

Today, at 4 o'clock, Miss Leila May Stevens becomes the bride of Mr. R. Letner Sewall at Brick House, the Manchester summer home of her mother, Mrs. John N. Stevens. The ceremony will be very simple, and is to be followed by a small reception. Miss Louise Stevens, sub-debutante sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Mr. Guy Currier of Boston, as best man, are the only attendants. Her uncle, Mr. R. K. Safford, gives Miss Stevens in marriage.

Miss Stevens made her debut during the season of 1928-29 at a large luncheon given by her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Augustus F. Goodwin also entertained that fall in her honor at the Essex County Club. She attended the Beaver Country Day School here and the Fermata School at Aiken, S. C., and finished off her education with an extended trip abroad. She is a member of both the Junior League and Vincent Club.

Mr. Sewall, the son of Mrs. Rufus Letner Sewall of Mt. Vernon st., Boston, and Indian Ridge, their place at Pride's Crossing, will take his bride to Europe for the rest of the summer, and while in England she will meet his relatives, for he is English, though he and his mother have made their home in this country for several years, and it is said that some day he will inherit a title. Lucky Leila!

Hope Bennett to Wed Wyeth

Newport, R. I., July 16 (US)—Miss Hope Bennett, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Bennett of Wild Acre, will become the bride of Walter Francis Wyeth, Jr., son of Mr. Walter Francis Wyeth of Waban, Mass., on Saturday, August 29.

This information was given out yesterday by Mrs. Bennett in contradiction of data imparted several weeks ago.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in Trinity church and a reception will follow at the Bennett residence in Ocean ave. The names of the attendants will be determined next week.

The Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, rector, will perform the ceremony, after which the couple will leave on a wedding trip. They plan to make their home in Brookline.

Mrs. Bennett will leave Saturday to pass the week-end in New York, accompanied by her daughters. The preliminary details for the wedding were completed yesterday by the parents of the couple at the home of Mr. Wyeth, Sr., in Boston.

Dartmouth Grad Will Wed Canadian Girl

Medix, Pa., July 16—Charles Le Boutillier, son of Robert De Boutillier of Wayne and Miss Jean Reynolds, daughter of Mrs. Mary J. Reynolds of Brockville, Ont., have obtained a license to wed. Le Boutillier, socially prominent here and in New York, is a graduate of Dartmouth. The marriage will take place in a few days.

Dr. Donoghue Sails on Mission Abroad

Dr. Francis D. Donoghue of Beacon st., a member of the Massachusetts Industrial Accident Board, recently designated by President Hoover as American delegate at the Sixth Congress of Industrial and Occupational Diseases at Geneva, will sail from New York today on the steamship America. He will return in September.

Ratshesky Visits His Beverly Home

Abraham C. Ratthesky, United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, has returned to his home here on a visit.

He was met in New York when the Bremen arrived by his wife, his son-in-law and several friends, and the party proceeded to the Ratshesky summer home in Beverly.

Mrs. Melvyn Douglas Will Sing in Opera

New York, July 16—Mrs. Melvyn Douglas, known on the stage as Helen Gahagan, has arrived here en route to Cleveland, and to sing opera. She was accompanied by her husband.

About people you know in Boston stores

By FRANCES BAIRD

The space occupied by Armand's dress shop on Winter st. will be vacated at the close of business tomorrow evening, and this space, in the building occupied by Conrad & Co., will be remodelled for the expansion of several departments of that store, B. J. Shaughness, sales manager, announced today.

One of the features of the remodelled space will be the attractive entrance to the basement store, which will be placed on the corner abutting the alley. Remodelling will begin immediately and when completed the Conrad store will occupy the entire white stone building.

SALES PRIZES AWARDED

Interest in the "sales suggestion contest" in progress at Houghton's, continues at high pitch since the announcement of daily winners of $5 cash prizes.

Miss Mary McAvoy, underwear department, won the Monday award; Miss Mary Wing, toilet goods, Tuesday; and Miss Theresa Frazier, drugs; and Miss Alice Miner, men's furnishings, each won $5 yesterday. The capital prize is a trip to New York will all expenses paid for one week.

GILCHRIST NINE PLAYS

AMBITION REALIZED

Jack Stromer, of Filene's mailing department, violinist, has achieved his ambition to play in the esplanade concerts with the orchestra of Boston Symphony players, directed by Arthur Fiedler.

Stromer has won this distinction after years of study. His experience with the Boston Civic Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Wagner and with other organizations whetted his ambition to some day become a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He has been with Filene's more than a year.

Curley Is Urged to Provide Glider Field

Claiming that Boston is far behind other cities in providing aeronautical training and facilities for its young people, Myron S. Huckle, instructor in aeronautics at M. I. T., has issued an appeal to Mayor Curley to have the southerly end of the Boston airport turned into a glider flying field.

Julia Doughty Ipswich Bride

Another wedding to take place this afternoon, is that of Miss Julia Doughty and Mr. Pierpont Stackpole, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard N. Doughty in Ipswich.

Miss Doughty attended the Milton Academy before making her debut several years ago, and since then has been away from Boston most of the time. She is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club.

Mr. Stackpole, who is in business here, will take his bride for an extended wedding trip, after which they will be at home in Boston.

Harvard Plan Defended

New York, July 16—Harvard students are not "spoon fed," Dean Alfred C. Hanford, of Harvard College, declared in an address to Columbia University summer students in McMillan Academic Theater.

The purpose of spending four years at Harvard was not to "create in the student an attitude of more receptivity," but rather to provoke personal thought, he said.

"Harvard emphasizes the individuality of the undergraduate, putting him largely on his own responsibility," he said. "Acting on the principle that a college by its own efforts cannot educate the student, for the last 20 years Harvard has shaped its educational policies to fit the work to the individual needs of the student so that he may find available the means for educating himself."

Woman Checks 'Rebel' Attack

London, July 16 (AP)—A handful of "rebel" laborites in the House of Commons made parliamentary history last night and this morning by keeping the House in session for 19½ hours. Few sessions have exceeded its length.

They were attacking the "Anomalies" bill which would make certain changes in the unemployment insurance practice and for a time it looked as though they might tire out the House and force an adjournment. It was a woman—Margaret Bondfield, minister of labor—who made them stick.

The Leftwingers offered a long series of amendments which would have virtually destroyed the bill, but they never could muster more than 30 votes and the rest of the Labor party, the Conservatives and Liberals were solidly against them.

Orme Joins Humphrey

Albert M. Orme has joined the staff of the H. E. Humphrey Co., advertising agents in Boston, it was announced today by H. E. Humphrey, president. Mr. Orme attended the University of Pennsylvania, where he specialized in economics and business administration at the Wharton School. He served for three years as officer of their New England Alumni Association.

EINSTEIN CONFESSES ISOLATION BITTERNESS

—By Gilbert Seldes—

AN INSOMNIAC FRIEND of mine did a lot of night-walking through the streets of Berlin several years ago. After a time, he began to notice that at two in the morning, or thereabouts, he would encounter a distinguished man, of about middle age, with free-flowing hair, walking alone. Presently they got to know each other, slightly, but the insomniac had not met a fellow-sufferer. The man he met was not sleepless, but solitary. He was not lonely, but he was happy being alone. His name was Albert Einstein.

• • •

A Natural Solitary

My friend was deeply impressed. Einstein, already famous, was without a circle of friends—or perhaps preferred to leave his friends; I believe he still was very poor at the time and the dizzy fall of the German mark (it was in 1923) had naturally affected him. Yet the separation from gaiety and common intercourse was obviously something deep in his being; without being unfriendly or even unapproachable, Einstein did not flower into immediate companionship. In the four pages he contributes to Living Philosophies he tells what he thinks of justice, government, warfare, art and religion; yet nothing is more moving than what he says of his own solitude:

• • •

In Single Harness

"My passionate interest in social justice and social responsibility has always stood in curious contrast to a marked lack of desire for direct association with men and women. I am a horse for single harness, not cut out for tandem or team work. I have never belonged wholeheartedly to country or state, to my circle of friends, or even to my own family. These ties have always been accompanied by a vague aloofness, and I wish to withdraw into myself increasee with the years.

"Such isolation is sometimes bitter, but I do not regret being cut off from the understanding and sympathy of other men. I lose something by it, to be sure, but I am compensated for it in being rendered independent of the customs, opinions and prejudices of others, and am not tempted to rest my peace of mind upon such shifting foundations."

A Noble Figure

It is noble and it is also pathetic, but I think that the nobility overweighs the pathos. I would not dare to be sorry for Einstein, to condole with him for the pleasures he has lost. He has been lonely, but he has done his work and in the end has been honored for it. He is one of the few world-figures of our time and we know almost nothing about him: that he plays the violin (the solace of solitary men), is absent-minded (the typical professor), believes that the Mooney case is a miscarriage of justice, and is interested in the Palestinian question. We know more than that about our favorite saxophone player.

It is phenomenal that a theory as abstract as his, as far removed from our daily life, as difficult to understand, should have caught the mind of the entire world. You can find Einstein in the movies and in the comic strips; he is surer of the front page than many kings and most divorcees. It is rather a good mark for humanity that it thinks so highly of its own masterpiece. There have been times when he would have been burned at the stake.

On an Old Photograph

In some strange, intricate and bygone way
She wears the ringlets of her sunswept hair,
Smiling demurely, as if quite aware
The Mode's a masquerader, anyway,
Behind whose mask the self-same wiles hold sway
That once dowered Eve; and that a woman's art
Depends no whit on if she plays her part
In garb of nowadays or yesterday.

A quality is that which time defies—
Deeper than beauty, and more rare than grace,
A charm that, lurking in a lovely face,
Nothing may age nor alter nor disguise:
The understanding in the eyes that laugh

Flower Cart

Like an unravelled rainbow at our feet.
One day, and it was Spring and daffodils,
And then arbutus from some quiet hills,
And oh, white iris, like a waterfall
Silver and smooth and delicate! Now all
And desperate eyes grow calm again that touch
Deep yellow roses, wet with tears of pity,
White roses, red! (It doesn't matter much
Ten cents for Summer! Carry it always!
(There will be fewer suicides today.)

Other Men's Ideas

From "The Perfect Hostess" (forthcoming) by Rose Henniker Heaton; Dutton:

If all conversation is momentarily paralyzed by some terrible gaucherie, the hostess must pull herself together, and make a statement as far removed from ascertained facts as possible, so that everyone present feels impelled to contradict her.

Example:

(A) What a pity it is that Westminster Abbey is to be pulled down to make the traffic easier.

(B) I'm so glad the Derby is going to be run in France next year.

(C) I think this plan of opening all the prisons and asylums next Sunday is a beautiful idea, but I don't know how it will work out.

(D) So we are to have no more income tax after next year, etc.

Yes, Mrs. Heaton's an English hostess—but you get the idea.

"I can't sleep worrying over the five-year plan—suppose Russia should start making L. Schmaltz Foolproof Sausage Casings and dump them in Boston."

Murder

—By the Reader—

A GOOD MANY PEOPLE read only detective stories. They have two complaints. Some weeks only six new ones come out, and usually the same type of person gets slain. They dislarge violently with the Reader, who doesn't read them (or only a few) because he feels that if a man's dead, he's dead—that's an end of it.

They want to find out who did it, and like plenty of blind clues and wrong steers. There's plenty of that thing in "The Columnist Murder" (Farrar & Rinehart).

The columnist gets shot at the debut of a musical revue. A nice little piece of publicity for the show, but tough on the columnist. Like most of the tribe he is a hard-working person who has to bang a typewriter for hours on end to earn money to lend to friends of people he knows but slightly.

• • •

Staggering Job

The corpse is Tommy Titchell, who works on a tabloid. And the clue is in his Monday morning gossip column. So the police look there for it. Their task is very difficult, because 85 people are mentioned in it. That makes 340 in four Mondays, with hangover grudges from the preceding months.

Culprit Is Found

An amateur sleuth finds the culprit. And so the story winds up well, though in a very conventional manner, and not quite so startlingly as you'd expect.

The story is of interest chiefly to those blooded to Broadway. It might be deduced, fairly correctly, that this is a take-off on Walter Winchell, who has that sort of language by the tail.

By Burton Davis

This gun opus, recommended to the sundry, as well as gumchewers, is by "Lawrence Saunders," otherwise Burton Davis.

Mr. Winchell, a callow youth from Wappingers Falls, and Louis Bobol, a stray elf from the Connecticut glades, seem to think this yarn has the correct atmosphere. Davis is a newspaperman who writes in Texas. This must account for the accuracy of the Broadway details.

• • •

Biography Told

Not all authors believe in documenting themselves as fully as Charles H. Sherrill. Before writing, for instance, his new book, "Bismarck and Mussolini" (Houghton Mifflin Co.), Gen. Sherrill made it a point to read every book and pamphlet written in any language which might be described as "anti-Mussolini."

By way of further preparation, Gen. Sherrill read widely in German history, made a thorough study of Fascism, had several personal interviews with Il Duce, spent half a day with the Kaiser at Doorn, visited the Bismarck country house at Schonhausen and had tea with President Von Hindenburg in the garden behind his official residence on the Wilhelmstrasse.

• • •

Index for Novel

This new trick of adding an index to a novel gives one a better idea of the book than any number of serious blurbs possibly could. "Intellectual Curse of;" "Freud, Sigmund;" "Bohemianism," "Fairies, Varieties of;" "Intimacy," "Vine-Leaves, As Worn by;" Romanticism," "Modernity," "Italy" and "Dawns, Some Thought on," are a few of the items that enliven Ethel Mannin's "Ragged Banners," published this week, and probably the first novel in history to have an index.

Cleanup

—By Deems Taylor—

GIUSEPPE WALKED into our lives about three weeks ago. The manner of his arrival was, as we were later to realize, distinctly an omen. An aged truck toiled painfully up the hill that leads to our house, stopped long enough to discharge a passenger, and departed grumbling. The passenger was Giuseppe, and the fact that the vehicle did not wait was the omen. It was assumed that Giuseppe had come for a stay; and the assumption was all too correct.

He had come, he explained, at the behest of a former employer who had heard that we needed someone to clean up the yard. This was obviously a lie and an unnecessary one.

For four years or more the yard has been the uncomplaining recipient of anything for which carpenters, masons, plumbers, painters, plasterers and electricians had no further use. "Cleaning up" is a feeble description of what the yard needs.

So we told him to go ahead. But where to begin? Beyond the living-room doors there is a flagstone terrace, and beyond that a stretch of terrain that combines the best features of the African jungle, the Gobi Desert, and Second Ypres. Here, thought Guiseppe, he would make a start.

• • •

The Trouble Begins

Whereupon M. made a fatal mistake. There was no point in beginning at this particular spot, she explained, because at some far distant date, it would be the site of a masonry retaining wall, a fountain, and an ornamental pool. Giuseppe received this information with manifestations of the most enthusiastic approval.

It was plain to see that he thought this a wonderful idea, and admired us unreservedly for having conceived it. Flattered, we expanded, pointing out just where the wall would be, where and how large the pool, where the water would come from, how green the stretch of imaginary lawn.

I am afraid we waxed a bit lyric. But Giuseppe didn't mind. "I come and dig pool. With two men. Tomorrow."

Naturally, we dismissed the idea. The whole thing was a dream, we were going away, we couldn't afford a pool.

To all of which Giuseppe scorned even an attempt at rebuttal. He remarked that the men would be good men, and very cheap, and we must order an assortment of timber, three yards of sand, 20 bags of cement, and two dozen steel rods. And he would be back tomorrow.

• • •

So He Came Back

He did come back tomorrow, and has come back ever since. At his instigation and under his commanding eye, approximately two acres of once arable ground have been laid waste; several miles of trenches have been dug, in which plumbers have laid assorted sizes of extremely expensive iron and brass pipe, and through which electricians have dragged reels and reels of costly lead cable; an abandoned well in the lower lot has been hauled, blinking, into the spotlight, and has been the gratified recipient of what amounts to a municipal water supply plant, over which a surprised and pleased carpenter is now erecting a palatial well house.

The pool was finished long ago. Giuseppe and his men saw to that. His cohorts vary in numbers from day to day, according to his whim. Some days he brings two, some days three. On the Fourth of July, inspired no doubt by the desire to do something really handsome, he brought four men and a motor truck.

• • •

A Second Pool

Past the upper pool, that is. Giuseppe thought it would be nice to have a lower pool as well, into which the upper one could drain. So he built it. We protested feebly, but not for long; for in these three weeks (is it only three weeks?) we have learned that if you block Giuseppe at one point he merely bursts out, more expensively, elsewhere.

The men, by the way, are all his relatives. So far he has produced three brothers, two uncles, a nephew, and a second cousin. They usually arrive en masse in the truck, which is also a distant relative, being the property of one of the brothers. On one gala day Giuseppe's wife and children arrived to take him home in the nephew's car. Giuseppe has five girls, and the nephew has four boys and two girls. They all came in one five-passenger sedan. The effect was very impressive; it was even more so, when, in addition, Giuseppe and the nephew joined the little band.

Of late, Giuseppe seems worried. So much masonry has gone up that even he is having trouble in thinking up places to put any more. In another week, unless he is careful, he and his relatives are going to run out of work. Then we really must see about having that yard cleaned up.

HERE'S HOW ON LETTERS

Darrell McClure, mentor of Little Annie Rooney, comic strip heroine, gives students in the Boston American Art Course class an important lesson today on the art of lettering in cartoons.

You might think that a simple thing like what we talk about in this lesson is of no great importance—just lettering, that's all. But Darrell McClure, who is anxiously watching Little Annie Rooney get ready to go voyaging, tells you today that it is important. He tells you, too, how to do it properly.

By DARRELL M'CLURE

The science of lettering is most apt to be disregarded by amateur artists. Yet it is as important as any thing in comic art.

No matter how good a drawing is, if it is cluttered up with sloppy lettering that is hard to read, it will irritate the reader and, as Harry Hershfield told you, that is one thing your pictures must never do.

At the top of the drawing I've made to go with this lesson, you see some horrible examples. Look them over carefully, because you must know what to avoid. Notice how hard they are to read and how they make your eyes uncomfortable. In the first one, for instance, the letters are badly spaced and very irregular, giving the impression of a hurried and indifferent job.

SHUN INDIFFERENCE

Indifference is no artist's quality. If you are artist enough to draw, you should be artist enough to take pride in the appearance of your work.

I drew the second balloon in my drawing to illustrate the danger of mixing capital and small letters. Capital letters are used almost exclusively in comic drawings, so don't use small ones. Capital letters are easier to read, and you must remember that the words in a drawing are supposed to be read at the glance of an eye.

Another thing—look out for your spelling. I purposely made a mistake in spelling in one of these balloons. Can you spot it?

PENCIL IN LETTERS

Rule guide lines in your balloons with a pencil. I've done it in ink to show you what I mean today, but you do it in pencil, so that you can erase the lines when the ink of your letters is dry.

Pencil in your letters first, then go over them with ink afterward. Don't get overconfident and try to letter directly in ink.

Remember that the important thing about the words of a cartoon is that they should be as easy to read as possible. And they shouldn't spoil the appearance of the drawing.

Get set for another lesson on comic strip drawing tomorrow. Soon we're going on to newspaper illustrating and sports cartooning. Practice hard on what you've already had so that you'll be ready.

U. S. Missionary Freed

Foochow, China, July 16 (AP)—A message received here today said the Rev. Clement Sites, member of the American Methodist Episcopal Missionary band, had been released from bandits who captured him Sunday.

RADIO SNARES OPERA

Broadcasters Securing Talents of Famed Celebrities

No longer is radio looked down upon by stars of the opera. It has been but a short while ago that damsels who sing arias and big male guns of the vocal realm looked askance at the possibility of broadcasting. Nearly every notable of the classics has now fallen in line and done a turn in a radio studio.

Radio has furnished no little money to these artists of the higher musical realm. It has become a sort of "old reliable" among them, dependable in these times as the sub-treasury.

There still remain four big celebrities in the musical world, however, whose consent has not been secured for radio work. These are musicians, it seems—Paderewski, Kreisler, Rachmaninoff and Godowski by name.

* * *

It is hereby predicted that these four will soon enter the promised land of radio, even though they appear quite indifferent to recent overtures by the studio bosses.

* * *

Any artist under contract with one network is hardly expected to broadcast for another. Just the same, that is what will happen one week from tomorrow night. Ben Bernie, CBS maestro, is scheduled to play during the program of Ripley, through WJZ, originating on the S. S. Leviathan at sea July 24.

* * *

Believe it or not, there are countless maidenly sighs heard over the land. Sighs of despair that come with the all too horrible realization that Rudy Vallee has ankled the aisle altarward. It must be a blow to many young ladies. Never mind, girls, just don't permit your minds to dwell on it, that's all.

*

Vincent Lopez has spurned a dozen offers this month, all requiring him to leave New York. He just won't do it.

* * *

There is another Boston boy being talked of no little in New York radio circles. He probably doesn't realize it. Ranny Weeks is the name and his prospects may be very good for network work (pun) this fall.

* * *

There's one big cigarette manufacturer whose brand is yet to take the air waves, although persistent rumor has been abroad. Every imaginable type of feature has been placed before the ciggie makers, the trouble being with the features. Apparently "they don't satisfy." The features, of course.

* * *

When folks at CBS headquarters opine "All's Quiet on the Western Front," they mean every button is in place on Jacques Renard's oversized vest. N. F. T.

Flash of a red bulb is "warning," a green light means "start the next number," etc. Perhaps the day will come when the world will do away entirely with leaders, and multi-colored lights will do the trick. Woe unto the color blind musician . . . Studio demonstration in the WEZ first aid course will be b'dcast at 7:45 tonight. George Phillip Johnson, Red Cross first aid instructor, will speak on "What to Do in a Highway Accident." M. G. M.

"No comebacks"—when you smoke Chesterfields.

The blend is right! It's an art to put tobaccos together the Chesterfield way—in the exact proportions which bring out the finer qualities of each tobacco type. A science too! For each type of tobacco used must pass rigid laboratory tests for mildness, for aroma, for taste. No raw inferior tobaccos ever find their way into Chesterfield cigarettes!

LADY IN RED CAN INCREASE LITTLE DEVILS' THRILL OVER WORLD CRISIS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

IT IS 17 YEARS, barring a week or two, since the newspaper reader has lived through such a week in the world's news. I have always wondered whether I should experience again that sense of completely alert interest, of tingling expectation, of genuinely more than theatrical suspense, that we all felt from day to day and from extra to extra during the last week in July, 1914. This past week has, in measure, repeated the sensation for us.

There weren't any extras. The modern newspaper has got out of the habit of issuing extras. The radio news flash has killed that example of enterprise. And, of course, the interest today has been of a different kind. In 1914 it was the interest of consummation, of forces so great and of such momentum that they could not be possibly stopped. Today it is the interest of frustration, or at least of the hope of frustration, the suspense of wondering whether organized intelligence in action is able—will be able—to check catastrophe.

I suppose that when we hear news of some great impending disaster there are two sides of our nature silently in conflict. Reason, of course, keeps its head and sincerely hopes that the reports are exaggerated and that the disaster will not take place or that the consequences may be averted. But there is a little non-rational devil in all of us, which, try as we may to keep it properly censored, gets a wicked little thrill out of savoring the magnitude of the catastrophe and out of hoping—against hope, really, and against reason—that things will be as bad as they possibly can be.

* * *

Little Devil in Us All

It is that primitive little devil in us that revels in the most sensational and violent of mystery novels and gangster films and stage melodramas. Psychologists call it the literature of escape. I am rather inclined to call it the literature of frustration. For in most events in real life this secret and ashamed and unworthy little secret craving for disaster is—thank God!—frustrated.

That is why the newspaper extras of the end of July, 1914, stick indelibly in the memory. Never in the world did civilization know such suspense, for never in history was news spread so quickly, not merely from day to day, but from hour to hour. At that, the new German crisis, essentially less sensational in its developments, though not in its potentialities, has given us one thrill we did not have in 1914. The radio news flash, mentioned above, gives us just enough tantalizing information to make us more eager for the papers to come.

July-August, 1914, satisfied every secret wish one might have for completeness of catastrophe. Nothing was left undone. With the unerring certainty of Destiny at work, nation after nation pitched headlong into the pit they had been digging. Hesitations, one was assured, were momentary and did not matter. Attempts to stave off Armageddon and Judgment were, we felt in advance, futile. The process was terrible to see, and grand and satisfying (to the little inner devil) beyond all possibility of ever being repeated.

* * *

May Still Be Too Late

Other events almost as important lacked that thrill, largely because we could not measure their importance at the time. Had we known in the autumn of 1917 all we know now about Soviet Russia's place in history, we might have felt the same way when Kerensky's government fell. But the issue was not clear cut. We could not foresee. And the information was too scrappy and contradictory. The English general strike of 1926 did offer something of the same thrill at its inception, when one faced the possibility of the oldest democratic state in the world going bolshevik. But we never were sufficiently convinced of its possibility to satisfy the little devil of expectation.

In a good many respects the German situation satisfied him, is still satisfying him, for things do not look as bright today as they did the day after the "Hoovertorium" was proposed and the world took a long breath of relief. It is still possible that France may have delayed too long, that the inner financial rottenness of Germany has gone too far to be cured by quick and easy means.

News, such events prove, can be infinitely more exciting than any fiction. No writer in English has perhaps the knack of J. Phillips Oppenheim in building up a story in which Europe and civilization stand on the brink of catastrophe, and secret councils of the great ones of earth gather hastily to avert disaster—prime ministers, dictators, super-millionaires and bright young secret service men who have the clue to it all. Mr. Oppenheim did it in his latest that I have read, "Up the Ladder of Gold," in which the climax came at a secret meeting of that very World Bank in Basel which we have been reading about.

* * *

Thrills in Hoover Ride

Yet how vastly more interesting and sensational in its implications was that actual meeting of a day or two ago, beyond anything that Mr. Oppenheim can devise. The radio and telephone have played fine parts in recent thrillers, but the news of Mr. Hoover in hourly oral communication with Paris had an actuality beyond theirs. Too bad that the press did not know in time that for an afternoon Mr. Hoover's communication with the outside world was cut off at the Rapidan camp by an electric storm. There was a situation for Mr. Oppenheim! But the wild ride to Washington, disregarding the speed limit, perhaps made up for it. It was quite in the Oppenheim manner.

No, the little inner devil that feeds on catastrophe is still on the alert. France has seen to that. France, the last Utilitarian left in the world today, the only country that deliberately acts on the announced policy that the enlightened selfishness of the individual means the greatest happiness of the greatest number. That belief, in the world of 1931, may still bring about catastrophe.

We do miss, however, the mysterious lady in scarlet named Olga or Sonia, in whose lip-stick case is hidden the secret formula for synthetic gold which will destroy all Europe's credit. It is unlikely that she is lurking around the Rapidan. There are no Casinos there. But until she appears in the story, we shall have to admit that Mr. Oppenheim is more entertaining, even if not so serious in his implications.

TWO SAVED BY LIFEGUARD

Thomas Sullivan, a Metropolitan life guard, rescued a youth and a young married woman from drowning at Magazine Beach, Cambridge, after both had been stunned when their heads hit a hard object and had to be brought up from the river bottom.

Those rescued were Mrs. John H. Powers, 23, of 350 Newbury st., and Jeremiah Jackson, 17, of 104 Hemenway st., both of Boston. They were taken to Cambridge City Hospital.

Jackson, it is understood, came up under the raft after diving and struck his head. He managed to swim from under the raft, but lost consciousness and sank.

Mrs. Powers dove from the raft and struck the bottom or some submerged object, police said. She was quickly brought to the surface by Sullivan, aided by her husband.

Boy Rescued From Pond on Common

Leaping into the Frog Pond on the Common Richard Jones of Sharon and Patrolman Dennis F. Collins of the La Grange st. station rescued Walter Roth, 8, of 31 Field st., Roxbury, who had waded beyond his depth.

LUCKY DOG IS NOW SURE OF DAILY BONES

Hearts and Purses Opened Everywhere to Save Puppy That the Law Doomed

All the world loves a boy and his dog.

Which is why the telephone there keeps ringing and the desk sergeant keeps answering, mechanically:

Yes, thanks. No, the license is all paid for. Yes, he got the dog back again."

TOUCHES ALL HEARTS

Which is why the desk sergeant mumbles to himself between calls something about "whoinhellwouldn'tpayforit."

The sergeant could say: "Yeah, a bunch of hard-boiled cops [redacted] for the license for the kid's dog." But being a hard-boiled cop he doesn't. He just says the license is paid for.

When the reluctant Sylvio tugged his reluctant pup into the Revere station yesterday and relinquished possession of his four-legged buddy because his mother—mother of nine children—didn't have $2 for a dog license, he started something. The Boston Evening American published the story exclusively yesterday and the ink on the paper was hardly dry before the telephone at the Revere station began to ring.

EVERYBODY WILLING.

Everybody, it seemed, wanted to pay the $2 so Sylvio's dog wouldn't be shot.

To the Boston Evening American direct from New York came one check for $2 from a Milton man who is buyer for a Boston department store. He did not want his name used, but he sent a message for Sylvio. Here it is:

"Sylvio, you are a worthy boy and show the foundation for making a noble man, for your obedience to the law in surrendering your beloved pet and the adoring love you exemplify by kneeling in homage at your parting prove the reality of your devotion and makes the sacrifice greater. I am older and bomelier than you, but I could get get down with you and the dog and like it."

Sylvio went back to the station twice to see how the cops were treating his buddy and the brief reunions of the two parted pals proved too much for the police themselves.

POLICE TO RESCUE

They took up a collection and on his third visit Sylvio took his buddy back. Inside the hard-boiled exterior of John Law there is often a soft yolk.

But today the telephone keeps ringing and the first mail today brought three checks, one for $10, one for $5, one for $2, all from persons who wished to remain anonymous. The money will be turned over to Sylvio; his family needs it.

PET RETURNS TO BOY MASTER FOR GOOD

Silvio Tufo of Revere has no fears of loosing his pet, "Jack," now. Scores of strangers offered to pay the $2 license fee for "Jack" after reading of the boy's failure to raise the money to save his pet. The pals greeted each other affectionately.

GOV. ELY BACKS PORT OF BOSTON BOOM

Thousands Join Project to Bring Prosperity Along City's Waterfront

Stacks of mail containing applications for membership in the Port of Boston Society, pouring in at the headquarters 80 Federal st., point to an overwhelming success of the project which is formed to make Boston the leading shipping port on the Atlantic coast.

Gov. Ely has joined the ranks of the Port of Boston Society. Residents of Boston keep him and Mayor Curley company in an intensive fight to put Boston over as a seaport.

The governor adds his suggestion for the success of the society. It is printed in today's Boston Evening American and makes interesting reading and sets forth constructive ideas.

He advocates the telling of friends of the society everywhere of the great advantages of the port of Boston as an embarking point for Europe.

The City of Boston Commercial, Industrial and Publicity Bureau, has set out to obtain a membership of 10,000. Indications are that this number will be exceeded. With 10,000 interested, active workers in the cause of assuring Boston's future as a seaport, there is no doubt the goal will be reached in quick time.

The Boston Evening American, ever responsible, upstanding prints from day to day the suggestions and professional men as part of its work in pushing forward the project of a bigger port of Boston.

Keep step with the hundreds of other people interested in Boston's future welfare. Mail your application for membership in the Port of Boston Society, 80 Federal st., today.

Application forms are printed in the Boston Evening American from day to day.

JOIN the man who's next to you,
And both work hard—the world will view
OUR Boston Port through different eyes;
We'll be closer to the goal!

SEND forth to those who do not know,
That if they would to Europe go,
We'll be closer to the goal!

EPHRAPS you've friends who live elsewhere
So when you write or visit there,
HELP you can by telling THEM;
We'll be closer to the goal!

BE sold yourself then sell your brothers,
Get the facts across to others,
EMPLOY this means our Port to push.
We'll be closer to the goal!

ELY ETS not forget the saying true,
"In union there is strength"—we've much to do,
ET work will build and then my friends,
We will have REACHED the goal!

CURLEY TELLS WHY A FEE IS PAID FLIERS

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty Expected to Arrive in Boston Tuesday

The $1500 to be paid by the City of Boston for the visit next week of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, world-circling fliers, will go to the National Broadcasting Co., Mayor Curley explained today.

He stated that a portion of the money will be turned over to the aviators to defray their expenses the remainder being devoted to the cost of arranging the trip and broadcasting appearances of Post and Gatty.

The mayor said a flat rate of $1500 had been established by the N. B. C. in every city on the tour of the fliers in order that the trip might not be commercialized through the sale of tickets.

Although no definite date has been set, indications were that the circumnavigators of the globe would reach here Tuesday noon.

Tentative plans include a reception and luncheon, followed by a parade to Boston Common for a civic reception. The evening program includes another parade, following a banquet to the fliers.

The tour of leading cities to be made by Post and Gatty will start from New York, where the itinerary is now being arranged. Mayor Curley sent them cordial invitations to visit Boston, and it is expected this city will be among the first on the list.

The failure of the aviators to come here in their famous m[illegible] Winnie Mae for the La[illegible] show on Tuesday night was due to a misunderstanding. The [illegible] thought the show had been postponed to Wednesday, but when it was held on schedule, found they lacked time to get here.

MALDEN TO GET NEW BUS LINE

Direct connection by bus between Winthrop sq., Medford, and Malden sq., Malden, will be inaugurated next Saturday, according to an announcement by officials of the Boston Elevated Railway.

DAILY TRUE STORY

A LIFE FOR A LIE

BANTON WON OVER STELLA'S MOTHER

THE WARDEN glanced out from his office toward the "Yard," where men clad in the prison gray moved back and forth on their varying tasks. I looked over his shoulder and with a nod he indicated one man in particular, working over the flower-beds underneath the office window.

See him?"—and when I nodded—"off hand what would you say might be his history and type. Let's see what kind of criminologist you really are."

The man in question was humming as he worked, putting each flower in place—they were tulips—patting the earth about them as if he loved each and every bloom. Old he seemed, bent and gnarled as though from a life of labor with his hands and muscles, and yet an aura of gentleness seemed to fairly radiate from him. If not contented and happy, he at least seemed thoroughly reconciled to his lot.

"I'd say—in answer to the warden's challenge—'that he's a man in for a crime he admits was a crime, and yet a crime he thinks to this very day was justified. An idealist, but with inborn ideals, not just those of environment. Now just tell me the story. What's he in for, and how long, and what chance has he to get out?"

"That's Andrew Stellke," said the warden. "He's doing life because he deliberately set off a charge of dynamite that tore down a wall of rock and buried under it a man Stellke felt unfit to live. He didn't give that man a single chance for his life. It was not a killing on the impulse of the moment, under the spur of rage. It was cold-blooded and deliberate. And when he came to trial he refused to say what prompted his act. He just told the judge and jury that the man who was dead was unfit to live. There seemed no reason why he should not have gone to the chair, but the jury, looking at him, wouldn't take his life for that other. Their verdict of guilty carried with it that recommendation for clemency that forced the judge to make his sentence life."

Why He Did It
Refused to Tell Court

"Didn't he ever say why he did it?"

"Stellke," he said at last, "told me, when he asked to be assigned to work among the flowers. He forbade me to use the information in any move to change his sentence.

"Ten years ago Andy Stellke was a labor foreman in the stone quarry of McLaughlin brothers. He handled all the charges that brought down tons on tons of rock for their paving operations. He was sober, thrifty and industrious, with all the inspired effort of men of his race when they are working for the ones they love. Stellke was married, had his little home all paid for, and thought the sun rose and set in Stella, his only daughter.

"Stella was just seventeen, blue eyed, like Andy, with corn-colored hair and a figure which, though slender, was just giving promise of a splendid womanhood. No man in all the township but would have given his right arm for the right to come accurting Stella, and yet no man who dared Andy Stellke's blue steel eyed glance when he warned them, one after another, not to be putting fool ideas in his baby's head.

"Burke Banton came out to the quarry the summer Stella was eighteen. Six feet two, he was straight as an arrow, a collar ad in feature and a college man as well. He was the engineer who was to lay out the land for extension of the McLaughlin quarries.

"Banton made it a point not to make any move that could count against him. In time he went to Andy Stellke and asked him, in all old world formality, for permission to call on his daughter. Andy demurred, but Banton played a waiting game until the old labor foreman at last gave grudging consent to a call.

"'But understand me, now, Mr. Engineer,' he told him, 'Stella is my life, my heart. Be sure you do her no harm. Should you so do I will kill you.

"Banton did go to see her. He took flowers to her mother. He took Stella presents. When his job at the quarry was within a month of being over he asked Stella to marry him. He was to go on a big engineering job to South America. He asked her to go with him as his wife.

"First he won over Stella's mother, when Stella had shyly given her own approval. It was her mother who got sturdy old Andy to consent. It was finally agreed that the wedding was to be the day Banton finished up his job at the quarry.

"A ten charge of blasting powder had been sunk in the wall of rock that was the south end of the quarry by the night shift. Andy had inspected every tunk hole and powder charge, every bit of wiring right up to the plunger on the hill where he was to set the mighty blast.

"Banton came up to him on the hill after everything was ready and when all the workmen had been ordered from the pit, all the red-flagged signal men posted to keep the quarry floor clear and free. Suddenly he turned to Banton.

"'Mr. Banton,' he asked him, 'when I was down there I left my coat, like the fool that I am. Stella's picture is in the pocket, and my watch. Will you be a good man and go get it for me. I'll talk here to be sure the plunger's safe.'

"Banton smiled, and, anxious to please the man who was to be his father-in-law, went leaping down the rocky path toward the quarry floor. Then, when he was directly under the great wall of rock which held the charge, old Andy Stellke deliberately rammed the plunger home.

"The earth shaking roar, the cloud of dust and stone had not started to settle when old Andy turned to the horror-stricken men about him, demanded that they call the sheriff, and sat down to wait. Then came the trial, old Andy's persistent silence, and the final word that sent him here, for life.

"'Andy told me,' he said, 'that he had learned that Burke Banton already was married. That he had two children, with his wife, living in fine style in New York.

Maybe Warden Long never told the story, but some one must have told the pardon board. Less than a year after Long told me the story Andy Stellke was paroled. And Long, when next I saw him, told me Stella had been married, and that Old Andy was out in time to be at her wedding.

Important Statements Not Entered, According to the Defense Counsel

Certain 1930 directors of the Gillette Safety Razor Co., and the pool in which they were interested, bought 111,500 shares of the company, according to a disputed record read in Supreme Court today.

The record of a directors' meeting on Aug. 15, 1930, was read by Damon E. Hall, of counsel for minority stockholders who brought a bill in equity seeking to recover $21,000,000 from the 1930 directors.

The record was disputed by Daniel Murphy, counsel for Maurice J. Curran, one of the defendants. He said he did not dispute the genuineness of it, but it would later appear in evidence that statements of importance were made at the meeting which did not appear in the record.

DIRECTORS FAILED TO ACT

Atty. Murphy pointed out that directors at a later meeting voted neither to approve or disapprove of the records of the Aug. 11 meeting.

This led Atty. William G. Thomas of plaintiff's counsel to say: "That was after our bill was brought. If it is to appear that records were tampered with, we await the evidence with eagerness."

Atty. Murphy replied: "I object to the words 'tampered with.' I merely say the record is not complete."

Atty. Hall pointed out that a blank page follows the purported record of the meeting. He said it was the only blank page in the record.

115,000 SHARES BOUGHT

Atty. Hall said the records show at the meeting Aug. 9 it was reported that 115,000 shares had been bought on the open market at an average price of $79.26 a share. The stock stood between 83 and 85 on July 28, on that date the pool sold 80,000 shares at 85. In the pool according to the records, were John E. Aldred, Aldred & Co., Horace J. Curran, Frank J. Fahey, Bradley W. Palmer, Philip Stockton and Ralph E. Thompson.

28 BIRDSHOT HIDING HERE

Ernest Direnzo, who lives in Baker st., West Roxbury, is busy. First he was picking blueberries and all of a sudden he was picking birdshot. Someone fired a gun and 28 of the tiny lead pellets plunked into his neck and head. His sister Albina is trying to make him comfortable. (Staff photo.)

HIT-RUN VICTIM NEAR DEATH

A hit-and-run driver felled Patrick Walsh, 14, of 299 Third st., South Boston, while he was riding a bicycle in Columbia rd., today, leaving him possibly fatally injured in the street.

The boy was taken to the Carney Hospital. He was suffering with a fractured skull, broken collar bone, and his lower teeth were driven into his gum.

According to police young Walsh was riding near Columbus pk., when a car approached from the rear, and knocked him from his bicycle, continuing on its way.

Tomasello's Wife Pat on Police Tag as 'Don't Fix, Abusive'

"Do not fix. Very abusive," was written on the report of Motorcycle Officer Cunniff, who arrested Mrs. Josephine Tomasello, wife of Samuel J. Tomasello, contractor, it was revealed in Quincy court today.

Mrs. Tomasello, who has a summer home in Merrymount, was fined $10 after her counsel had refused to plead nolo and have the case filed. She appealed.

Cunniff told the court Mrs. Tomasello abused him, declared she would have the case fixed and defaulted twice.

3 BOYS HELD AS ROBBERS

Three Roxbury youths in Quincy court today were held for the grand jury on charges of attempted breaking and entering of a Randolph chain store.

William C. Hogan, 19, of Taber st., who is under $2000 bonds from Suffolk court on a burglary charge, was held in $5000. On charges of larceny of an automobile, operating with no license, operating after his license was revoked, and giving a false name, he was held in $500 for appearance in Quincy court July 23.

James M. Downey, 22, of Codman pl., was held in $5000 on the attempted breaking and entering charge, also having a record, and Bernard O'Donnell, 20, of Smith st., was held in $500.

According to police, the youths were caught following a mile chase after they had been surprised by police while trying to enter the store in Randolph.

IT'S TOUGH ON THE DUMMY

Love for Movies Traps Boy Burglar

Love of the movies resulted in the arrest of Daniel Stuart, 19, of Parnell st., Roxbury, who in Roxbury court today was sentenced to Concord Reformatory for breaking and entering the homes of Rachel Johnson, 17 Beaton st., and Louis Domigs, 28 Madison st., both in Roxbury.

Patrolmen Luke Farley of Station 9, and Stanley Sisck of Station 10, knowing Stuart to be a movie fan, watched a local theater and caught him. Two months ago he jumped from the Troy express while being taken to the Shirley School.

Poisoned Woman Is Near to Death

Mrs. Merthilda Streeter, 36, of 53 Agawam st., Revere, is in a critical condition at the Massachusetts General Hospital today after swallowing a quantity of poison.

Police say Mrs. Streeter sent her 14-year-old cousin, Arthur Bluin, to a store this morning to purchase a bottle of iodine. When he returned to her house, she went into the bathroom, and a few minutes later he heard her collapse to the floor.

SCHOOLGIRL SAYS SHE WAS FORCED TO WED UNDER 'THREATS'

BECAME BRIDE AS A RESULT OF 'FEARS'

Randolph Student Seeks to Regain Her Freedom in a Court Action

A story of a 17-year-old Randolph High School girl taken from her classroom and forced by threats to participate in a marriage ceremony was revealed today in a petition for annulment filed in Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham.

The petition was filed for Ruby V. Studley by her grandfather, Frank R. Grover of 410 Main st., Randolph, and named Lawrence H. DuBois, 20, of that town.

The petition charges that DuBois, by means of duress and threats against her life, compelled the girl to marry him in Portsmouth, N. H., on April 27, 1931. The marriage was never consummated, the petition states, and the court is asked to declare it null and void.

CHARGES "THREATS"

The story contained in the petition is that on the morning of April 27 Ruby Studley left her grandfather's home, where she lives, and went to high school.

Later that morning, according to the petition, DuBois appeared at the school and told her she must marry him. If she did not do so, the petition charges he threatened he "would fix her so that nobody else could have her."

Through fear of refusal, the petition says, she accompanied him by automobile to Portsmouth, N. H., where DuBois procured a marriage license after obtaining a five-day waiver. The ceremony was performed by Elmer C. Clark, city clerk and justice of the peace, it is charged.

PARTED ON RETURN

The couple returned to Randolph the same day, arriving late in the afternoon, and separated immediately. The girl went to the house of her grandfather and DuBois to that of his aunt, Mrs. Percy Thomson of Randolph.

The petition says no consent was given by the parents of the girl or any other person lawfully authorized to do so, and the only reason Miss Studley entered into the marriage was through fear.

It also is charged that in procuring the marriage license DuBois falsely gave her age as 18.

QUINCY GIRLS ARE FOUND

Two Quincy girls Josephine Bellorte 15, and her sister Anna, 7, of Thomas st., who were reported missing last evening to the Quincy police were found early today at the home of their brother-in-law.

The girls, instead of going directly to their own home after enjoying the afternoon and evening at Wollaston beach, went to their brother-in-law's home. They were returned to their homes shortly after midnight.

PHONE PENSION FUND TOTALS 5 MILLIONS

The trust fund used in connection with the pension system of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company amounts to approximately $5,500,000, Thomas J. Feeney, assistant to the company president, today revealed at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission on customers' petition for a reduction in telephone rates.

Feeney was the first witness called by the attorney for the petitioners, Wycliffe C. Marshall, of Watertown.

Elaborating on the pension phase, Feeney said the trust fund originated through $2,000,000 in contributions from the company's surplus.

"It is designed to promote in the various employes, faced with sickness, accident, old age and death, a feeling of economic security that they might thereby give better service," he continued.

He said the highest pension now being paid is $650 a month. The employe receiving this sum, he added, had served the company 45 years.

He then explained the publicity department of the company and cited the value of its advertising campaigns.

EXAMINE the chart above. It records the Octane Ratings (the new way of determining the anti-knock quality of motor fuels, adopted by the Society of Automotive Engineers) of the 12 leading premium fuels. Notice the way they vary. And the great superiority of ESSO over even its nearest competitor.

ESSO shows similar superiority on every other point of performance. Developed in the world's leading oil laboratories, ESSO is more than just another Ethyl fuel. Not the Ethyl it contains, but its fuel base is what makes it so radical in advance.

ESSO gives a distinctly new "feel" to driving . . . in all types of cars. Probably the first difference you will notice will be its sensational knockless power . . . actually, in high compression engines, 4% to 11% greater than that of other premium fuels and as high as 20% greater than that of ordinary gasolines.

Give ESSO a 10-day trial. You'll understand why millions both here and in the 20 foreign countries where it is also sold will use nothing else!

YOU CAN'T REMODEL A MAN AFTER MARRIAGE

By HELEN ROWLAND

ONE OF the bright little day dreams with which Woman has always fooled herself is the sweet conviction that she can change a man's ways after marriage. That the wedding ceremony is a sleight-of-hand performance which will transform a playboy into a substantial plodder, a lazy man into a hustler, a grouch into a being of sweetness and light, and a philanderer into a one woman man.

HELEN ROWLAND.

But the only way in which a man ever changes is to grow "more so" as the years go on.

You may throw out a man's college sweaters, burn up all the pictures of his dead loves, put him into the right clothes and back him into a dinner coat; but you can never change his morals, his manners or his habits.

You may make him shave off his mustache, subdue the general color scheme of his haberdashery, use the right fork and learn the new dance steps; but you can never change him ABOVE THE EARS.

If a man is a philanderer before marriage, the wedding ceremony will never take the roving look out of his eye.

A man who loves women wholesale or en masse can never settle down permanently to any one woman, and no wedding-ring can bind his errant affections, however honestly he may believe it will. Some men's hearts are as cold as a stuck kitchen flue. But the heart of a sentimental rover will never jell. It is always running over and spilling at some new woman's feet.

And it is the same with other failings. Many a woman has married a man whose first love was his pocket-flask and tried to dry him out sufficiently to domesticate him. But only once in a million cases can a drinking man be weaned from his bottle and made into a model husband by the magic touch of love—and then it's a miracle.

Most of all, in his little pet habits is a man as "set" as a permanent wave, today, yesterday and forever.

If he is a night-hawk who never wants to hit the pillow before midnight in his bachelor days, he will be a house-prowler after marriage until the day he closes his eyes in his coffin and CAN'T get up and turn on the lights.

The best way to make a satisfactory husband out of a man is to marry the kind that doesn't need remodeling—to pick out one whose morals, manners and habits are the sort that appeal to you, whose little failings are the kind you can best put up with, and whom you love so much, anyway, that you wouldn't want to change him. Because nothing ever changed a man, except old age, rheumatism and death! No woman can change a man—she can only EX-change him.

Dancer Sees Ravages of Time

WITTE, the conductor, who had No. 221 in the left wing could not sleep either. Old people sleep so little. He was sitting at his window, pressing his forehead against the windowpane and staring at the blank wall opposite. Fragments of a Beethoven symphony were going through his head. He had never conducted it.

He heard Bach,—the tremendous "Crucify Him" from the Matthew Passion. I have wasted all my life, thought old Witte and all the never-sung music of his life made a lump in his throat and he gulped it down. There was the rehearsal for the ballet at half-past eight in the morning.

His would sit at the piano and play the same old march to the convolutions of the ballet, always the same Spring Waltz and Mazurka and Bacchanal. He ought to have left Elisaveta while there was still time, he thought. Now it was too late. Elisaveta had become an old woman and he could not leave her. She would have to see it through with her for the few years that remained.

Elisaveta Alexandrovna Grusinskaya could not sleep either in the depth of night and heard the swift and never-ceasing flight of time. There was a twofold ticking in the room—from a bronze clock on the writing table and from her wrist watch on her bedside table. Each ticked the flight of seconds, and yet one ticked faster than the other.

It made her heart beat to listen to them. She turned on the light and got out of bed, and went to the looking glass. The passage of time met her there—there most of all.

It met her too in her press notices, in the shocking rudeness of the newspapers. In the success of the ugly and clumsy dancers that were now in fashion, in the losses on her tours. In the feeble applause, in the vulgar way her manager, Meyerheim, talked—everywhere, everywhere, she saw the passage of time. The years she had danced away were in her tired ankles, in the shortness of breath that came over her after 32 tours of classical dances, and in her blood, too, that now often pulsed in her neck and flushed her cheeks. It was hot in the room, though the French window on the balcony was wide open. Grusinskaya took her pearls out of the small suitcase, two handfuls of cool pearls, and let her face down to them in vain.

Her eyelids were still hot and still smarted from the paint and the footlights; her thoughts still troubled her, and the clock and the watch still raced on. Grusinskaya wore a rubber bandage under her chin, her hands and lips were steeped in ointment. The sight of herself in the looking glass was so hateful that she quickly turned out the light.

In the darkness she swallowed a veronal tablet and began to weep the hot tears of a lonely and passionate woman; then the drug took hold of her and at last she fell asleep.

Just outside some one got out of the lift. It might be the young man from Nice. Grusinskaya took him with her into her veronal dream. He was in No. 69 and he was the handsomest man she had ever seen.

The occupant of No. 69 whistled softly on his way to his room, not unpleasantly, and merely because he was happy. He was careful in his room to make no noise and when he was in his pajamas and smart blue leather slippers he was more silent than ever. There was something of the athlete in this handsome young man. Whenever he passed through the lounge it was as if a window of sunshine were opened in a cold room. He was a marvelous dancer, cool and yet vibrant. There were always flowers in his room. He loved them and their scent. He was quick to forgive girls in the street. Sometimes he would merely look at them with pleasure, sometimes he would speak to them, and make their acquaintance.

Sometimes, too, he got drunk, but in so amiable and high-spirited a fashion that no one could take it amiss. In the mornings it was not very pleasant to have the room beneath his, for then he went through his physical exercises and soft thuds came at regular intervals through the ceiling. He wore smart bow ties and low-cut waistcoats. His clothes sat as easily on his muscular body as the hide on a pedigree animal. Sometimes he went off in his little four-seater and nothing more was seen of him for a couple of days. He bought laces from street vendors, cigarette lighters that cost not half, little birds of India-rubber, and countless boxes of matches.

Suddenly Mr. Baines' horses would come over him. He got up at six, went by bus to Tattersall's and delighted with delight the scent of sawdust, saddlery, stable manure and sweat. Then if an animal took his fancy he rode in the Tiergarten, breathing his fill of the gray early mist of a March morning among the trees, and returned well satisfied to the hotel.

His head had been found before now in the kitchen courtyard behind the service stairs standing beside a gutter full of slops and refuse and staring up to the top of the five stories where the aerials hung beneath the colorless sky. Possibly he had designs on the one pretty chambermaid in the hotel.

FROCK FOR SUMMER

From Mirande's Collection

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—

Late Style Gossip of Paris

CARLED FROM PARIS

PARIS, July 16—The garden party at the exclusive Polo Club at Bagatelle in the Bois de Boulogne was indeed delightful. It was the occasion of the important contests for the military cup and concours D for elegance of horse-drawn vehicles in which tally-ho phaetons and high carts competed.

Tea was served under the trees surrounding the club house and bordering the polo field, where, after the matches were completed, the vehicles paraded before the crowd at the tea table and ranged all along the barrier fence. The sartorial picture at this event was interesting.

There was much all white and white with accessories of black, bright blue or bright green. There were many long little jackets ending at or above the waistline, with short puffed or ruffled or pleated sleeves and long gloves. At the races there were many one-toned or white crepe de chine or georgette dresses, with short colored jackets or a long coat, worn open in front and loose hanging, often with one sleeve. Black and white, bright blue and white, brown and white were the favored combinations for printed crepe de chines or chiffons.

Trouble Ahead, Miss Fairfax Warns Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please give me some advice. It seems that I am in love (truly) with a young man I have known for two years. He was married rather in a "fog" six months ago. I do not know his wife to speak to. He is 23 and I am 18.

Nobody has ever set my heart going as he has. I see him every morning and also every evening on the train. And then I meet him dancing, etc. If I shouldn't see him in the morning I feel depressed the whole day. Just the sight of him makes my heart beat faster and makes my whole day sunny. When he touches my hand, shivers run up and down my spine—he inspires me to work better.

Of course, I will meet another young man some day and be married, but really, Miss Fairfax, is there any reason why I should stop doing him when I know that he has sense enough not to let it turn his head, and that he will stay with and love his wife?

MERCEDES.

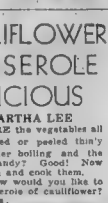
Dear Mercedes: I take it for granted you are a very impressionable young person. You are likely to have many affairs just like this one. Of course you are, at 18 years of age. Don't take these emotional thrills so seriously. If this young man knew that you were devoted to him, he would realize the impropriety of seeing so much of you, touching your hand, and so on. As a married man, he should devote himself to his wife and he should not philander with you at all. There is nothing but trouble ahead if you cultivate this friendship. I would certainly advise your breaking it off.

CAULIFLOWER CASSEROLE DELICIOUS

By MARTHA LEE

WELL, ARE the vegetables all ready—scraped or peeled thin'y and the water boiling and the salt box handy? Good! Now we'll start in and cook them.

Firstly, how would you like to make a casserole of cauliflower? well hope, has been washed and soaked for thirty minutes in salted water. Now break it into sprigs and cook it about twenty minutes with ¾ of a cup of boiling water in a covered pan. We'll also need 1½ cups of boiled macaroni, 1½ cups of cooked stewed tomatoes, ½ cup American cream cheese, salt and pepper, and some buttered cracker crumbs.



Martha Lee

In a buttered casserole place alternate layers of macaroni and the cauliflower. Add the grated cheese to the tomato sauce and stir over the fire until smooth. Season with salt and pepper to taste and pour over the contents of the casserole. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for about 30 minutes. And then say you don't like cauliflower!

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

P. S. Will you do me a favor? Will you let me know what size your favorite pie plate measures across the bottom? Some one who makes pie plates wants to know the size that New England women like, and if you'll tell me the size, I'll be glad to send you some interesting recipe books showing new uses for new and old friends in the food world.

Household Hint

BANISHING Insect Pests—Warm weather and dampness have a tendency to encourage cockroaches, water bugs, ants, etc. Roaches have a faculty of disappearing in daylight, behind baseboards, cracks, nooks and corners. If nothing is done to eliminate them they will soon overrun their haunts.

While borax is effective in repelling roaches, water bugs, ants, etc., it is also non-poisonous and safe to use.

Although it isn't necessary, there are various ingredients used to bait the insects, such as sugar and cocoa mixed with pure powdered borax. The simplest method is to wash the cupboards, woodwork and likely haunts with a solution of warm water and common borax (about 2 tbsps of borax to a quart of water); then sprinkle the dry, powdered borax in the backs of pantry shelves, behind baseboards and around the kitchen sink. A few applications is all that is necessary to immediately drive away the pests. —Miss B. MacDonald, 4 Colbert rd., West Newton.

Happy State of Mind Induces Good Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

But talk about it as we may, we really do little to improve health. In the last analysis, we do about as much to get to heaven as we do to get health.

If it were not for our natural possessions of muscles, nerves and vigor, most of us would be invalids. Yet in spite of all we do in the way of abusing our bodies, we live out the normal expectation. Nature is extremely kind to us.

Really, there are many puzzles in life. Human experience makes us skeptical of the real value of the many things which are heralded as essential to health.

Without conceding a thing as to the importance of these rules of living, I wish to turn aside from the usual preachments about health. I want to ask you today what is the most important thing in your life. What is the most compelling factor in your existence?

What you are, how you act, how your heart behaves, how your food digests, what your general welfare is depend to an amazing degree upon your state of mind. For happiness or unhappiness determines your physical state to a remarkable extent.

As I study the problems of existence it seems to me happiness is the really essential possession. There can be no doubt, of course, that the physical and mental states are intimately related. Anything that lowers the vitality affects unfavorably the mental condition.

The Beauty Box

GROWING girls who fear that they are going to be pinfeathered women need milk, raw fruits and vegetables, all of which are bone growing foods. After the age of 18 there is no hope of adding to stature. A diet that is not properly balanced defeats development. Girls who romp out of doors, who swim and get hard muscular exercise are likely to be better at the growing game than listless, inactive darlings.

She Isn't a Favorite With Right Kind of People

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE HONORABLE John W. Hennerhasset is very sorry for himself.

And Mrs. Honorable John is the sorriest of all.

The Honorable John married Mrs. Honorabus White before he was a young lawyer in a country town and she was the pretty daughter of the town banker.

Half the boys in town were in love with her, but she fell dead in love with the Honorable John and nothing would do but she must marry him.

Mrs. Honorable John was as proud as a peach of him; she wasn't very well that winter and her cook left, and there was an epidemic of "flu," and the roof leaked, but she went to the rallies and the speech-making, and she gave teas and entertained distinguished visitors. And all at once the Honorable John was elected.

Mrs. Honorable John didn't have time to think much about the glory of that, her little boy was born and her father died on the same day.

When her father was gone it turned out he wasn't as rich as people thought he was, and the Honorable John had to look after his wife on his salary in Congress and the few little legal jobs he was able to pick up by the way.

So they went to Washington and took a rather mean little house, rather far out, and the baby was fretful, and poor little Mrs. Honorable John was far from well. She tried to keep up with her brilliant husband, but her head ached and her back ached, and she was tired all the time. Her clothes were not right, and she knew it. The Honorable John knew it, too, and a second cousin of his came to Washington and told him what a great man he was, and she sort of hinted that it was a great pity the Honorable John had married so young.

Mrs. Honorable John has three children now, all fine, healthy, well-behaved little rascals. She sees to that. She looks after their diet, and makes them brush their teeth, and tells them the right kind of bedtime stories, but somehow she isn't a favorite with the "bright people."

The second cousin is always saying something about that, and poor little Mrs. Honorable John knows what the second cousin is doing, but she can't prove it, and she knows that her husband is a little ashamed of her, too.

And people say what a pity it is that such a brilliant man should be hampered by such a little dowdy of a wife, so all the Honorable John's friends are sorry for him, and the Honorable John is sorry for himself, but do you know I'm just perfectly certain that a great man like Mrs. Honorable John?

I guess it is sort of foolish—but I am.

WHEN MAKING PRESERVES, PUT UP A LITTLE AT A TIME

According to a leading home-economics expert, it is better to make preserves in small quantities frequently, than to put up "a lot" at one time. Cooking in large quantities prevents even cooking, causes the fruit to lose its shape and prolongs the cooking period.

In preserving, remember that refined cane sugar is the recognized standard of housewives all over the country. Now is the time to watch the markets so you can put up your favorite fruits when they are at their peak of goodness. Sugar is at an abnormally low price. Preserve with refined cane sugar. The Sugar Institute.

WHOOPEE! HERE COMES THE BIGGEST ROLLER OF 'EM ALL!

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Sharkey on Walker. | "Had to Take Him."
"Last Man I Wanted." | "Can Gain Nothing."
"Little Ones Tough." | "But Can Lose All."

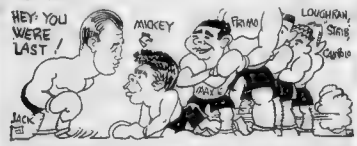
Here's Some Straight-From-Shoulder Talk

"What does Sharkey think of Walker, his honest, personal view. His uncamouflaged opinion, with no thought of deceiving you? "They couldn't have picked one tougher," says Jack with troubled eye. So tune in, fans, and listen, and Jack will tell you why.

Just how does Jack Sharkey view his coming match with Mickey Walker? Just how does the Boston heavyweight, who is world's champion in everything except the name, look upon his coming encounter with the game little man who jumped at a match with the Boston Gob, who has Max Schmeling so scared the world's champion is almost afraid to be in the same county with him? How does the Squire of Chestnut Hill view the encounter which will cause thousands of dollars to pour into the coffers of one of the worthiest of all Sweet Charity's enterprises, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund?

Does the Big I Man from Boston look upon Smiling Micky as a setup? Does he think he quickly is going to pick the Rumson Bulldog apart and see what he is made of? Does he think the little fellow is going to be a "cinch" for him?

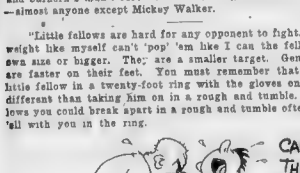
Sharkey answered all those questions for us as we sat fanning with him in the Boston Garden while he was waiting for his protege, Ernie Schaaf, to answer the gong against Jim Maloney, the other night. We believe Jack felt that he was talking to a friend, that he had nothing to hide, nothing to veil and was not talking for "ballyhoo" purposes or for any publicity the match might gain.



"Mickey Walker is the last man in the world I wanted to meet," began Sharkey. "I have nothing to gain by the match, everything to lose. If I knock him out the fans will say, 'Why shouldn't Sharkey knock him out? Look at the difference in weight, reach, height!' If I fail to stop Walker or give him a convincing whipping—and let me tell you that whipping a little fellow is ofttimes harder than rocking a big fellow to sleep—the sports world will give me the horse laugh, my reputation will suffer and Max Schmeling quickly will seize upon it as further means to avoid the match he solemnly promised me but ran out of and still is breaking all records in running from.

"No, I didn't want the Walker match. I never ducked or avoided anyone. Whoever the promoters or my manager wanted me to fight I fought. Very often my manager would say, 'We better avoid this or that fellow. He's a tough guy to make a showing against.' But always I would say, 'Aw forget it, Johnny. Go get him for me.' The first match I ever hesitated on was this Walker match. First of all I wanted Schmeling. You know how hard I've tried to get that Dutchman in the ring with me. After Schmeling I wanted Carnera. He and I would draw the biggest gate any match has drawn in years. After Schmeling and Carnera I didn't care who I met. Loughran, Campolo, anyone—almost anyone except Mickey Walker.

"Little fellows are hard for any opponent to fight. A heavyweight like myself can't 'pop' 'em like I can the fellows of my own size or bigger. They are a smaller target. Generally they are faster on their feet. You must remember that meeting a little fellow in a twenty-foot ring with the gloves on is entirely different than taking him on in a rough and tumble. Little fellows you could break apart in a rough and tumble often can raise 'all with you in the ring.



"Little fellows of any kind are bad enough. A little fellow like Mickey Walker can be plain poison. Mickey has an awkward, deceiving style. At times he comes in all elbows and is a wizard at getting inside. He punches like a heavyweight, packs a smashing punch in each hand. Mickey is as game as a bulldog. You'll have to knock him dead to stop him. He won't quit.

"See what I'm up against? I've got to go into the ring with everything against me. The crowd naturally will be with Walker. I don't blame 'em. I'm for the underdog, myself. Whenever you see a little feller fighting a big feller you can't help but being with the little feller. The crowd will be against me in the Walker match. That will be nothing new in my gay young life. If I found the crowd with me the surprise might knock me cuckoo.

"Now I've not only got to whip one of the greatest, gamest little men that ever drew on a glove, and whip him convincingly, but I've got to whip one of the shrewdest, most conniving, unscrupulous managers in the game. I know what I'm up against when I fight a fellow from Jack Kearns' stable. Say, that fellow will 'pull' anything that will make Walker win. He's already starting in enflaming the public, expert and officials against me. And I know that Kearns will give Mickey instructions to go into the ring and pay no attention to the rules or anything else. Kearns will scheme to enable Mickey to leave the ring a winner by some hook or crook, foul or fair.

"When I'm fighting Mickey Walker I'm not only fighting the Kearns bunch, but the Carnera gang and the Schmeling gang as well. They're all out to get me. Against Sharkey they'll unite in a common cause. When I meet Mickey Walker it is going to be a case of Jack Sharkey against the world. It's the toughest match I ever took."

DE GLANE SIGNS TO MEET GUS

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane, sensational Frenchman who tossed Ed George at Braves Field the other night, proved himself every inch a champion when he stepped into Paul Bowser's office and signed a contract to defend his title against Gus Sonnenberg at the Wigwam on July 30.

While Max Schmeling sulks in his tent in Germany and refuses to meet Jack Sharkey, DeGlane agrees to tackle the toughest wrestler in the world.

DeGlane would have good reason to try to avoid a meeting with the Dynamiter, as the latter has beaten him twice. Gus scored these victories prior to DeGlane's win over Strangler Lewis at Montreal.

DeGlane established himself as one of the greatest wrestlers of all time by the masterful manner in which he defeated the youthful George.

I liked the way George rushed at DeGlane. Give this youngster a couple of more years of experience and I don't think there will be a wrestler he won't be able to lick. Make a note of this prediction.

DeGlane compares with the famous wrestling masters of old. I don't believe even Frank Gotch was DeGlane's superior when it comes to ring generalship and the ability to score with crushing holds.

DeGlane was unmarked after his victory over George. He is also eager to sweep into action against Sonnenberg.

DeGlane to Give Sonny Chance

"When I won the title," said DeGlane, "I promised that every first-class challenger would receive an opportunity to meet me. I gave George first chance at the title in view of the fact he defeated me on the coast. Now Sonnenberg is to get his opportunity.

"Sonnenberg defeated me twice because I didn't have a proper defense for his flying tackle. I believe that I proved against George that I know how to knock off a flying tackle. My rabbit punch does the trick."

Sonnenberg was jubilant at the signing of the title bout.

"I never thought I would get another chance to win the title," said the Dynamiter. "I'll tear DeGlane to pieces. You can bet everything you have on this.

"I have trained carefully ever since I lost to George on the Coast. I went from a hospital into the ring with George.

"I haven't lost a bout since I was upset by George. I feel I shall conquer DeGlane and once more establish myself as the world's leading wrestler."

CHOCOLATE IS NEW CHAMP

It was a technical knockout, the fight being stopped in the seventh round. Bass, battered and bleeding and virtually blind, was unable to go on.

Chocolate started right from the bell of the first round to give Bass a trimming. It got worse and worse each round, until finally referee Leo Houck stopped the fight to save Bass from serious injury. There had been no knockdowns, however.

Bass had been a four-to-one favorite, with the "wise money" going heavily on him, and the Chocolate backers scarce, until shortly before the fight. Then they dropped to 7 to 5 on Bass.

By BILL GRIMES

During his first round in a state dollar event, Senator Joseph W. Monahan of Sandy Burr furnished the big upset in the 37th Massachusetts amateur golf championship by defeating Francis Doyle Wachusett medalist of the qualifying round today at the Worcester Country Club by a score of 5 and 3.

Monahan played steady golf throughout the 15 holes and was only two over fours when the match ended while Doyle was unable to get off to better than a five consecutive fives start.

Monahan piled up a two hole lead in reaching the turn and was three up going to the 12th, which he three-putted to lose to a five.

Monahan:
Out ..... 5 6 4 5 4 4 3 4 5—39
In ..... 4 5 3 6 5 5 3 5 5—40—79

Doyle:
Out ..... 5 5 5 5 5 3 4 4 4—40
In ..... 5 4 6 4 4 6—79

Doyle's Nerves Shaken by Escapes From Death

Doyle was not the Doyle of the qualifying round, which was probably due to the fact that while racing down from Worcester this morning, he was forced off the road by a truck in Lexington and went into the woods, narrowly escaping death.

He avoided serious injury by pulling up the emergency brake just as the car was about to crash into a tree.

As Doyle turned into the parking space at Worcester he collided with a rock guarding the gateway and just missed being overturned. Therefore it is not to be wondered at that Doyle was shaky in the first five holes of his match and, though he pulled himself together for the next three holes, he had but one par hole from the ninth through the 13th, the 12th being at the 17th and help his advantage through the home hole.

Crossley and Peterson Stage Real Battle

Two Juniors, Wilfred Crossley, the champion, and Eddie Peterson, Oakley, had a real battle before the Norfolk boy won by a one-hole margin. Only three holes were won during the outward round and Peterson had a one-hole lead at the turn.

Crossley went out in front at the 12th after winning the 11th, but Peterson squared the match with a fine par five at the 13th only to drop back again when he failed to catch the green at the short 14th.

After Peterson had pulled up on even terms again by virtue of a birdie at the 15th, they halved the next two holes with pars and Crossley won the match on the home green when Peterson three-putted from 30 feet away for a 6.

Crossley's card:
Out ..... 3 6 4 5 4 4 4 5 5—40
In ..... 3 5 5 5 4 5 4 4 5—39—79

Peterson's card:
Out ..... 4 5 6 5 4 4 4 6 4—38
In ..... 5 4 6 5 4 3 4 6 —41—80

Chick Grasse, Mt. Pleasant, and Bill Reidy, Wachusett, were the fourth pair that had to go the entire route to reach a decision. Reidy had a one-hole advantage at the turn, but Grasse caught him and finally won on the home green.

Wade's Fast Finish Wins Him Match

Al Wade, Norfolk, and Johnny Nies, United Shoe, staged a hectic battle. They were all flat after nine holes, but Wade had a one-hole lead going to the short 14th. Then he opened up with all his guns cracking pars for birdies on

Stratton and Eaton in Tight Match

Four of the 16 first-round matches went to the home hole. Emory Stratton and Charlie Eaton battled over the entire distance before the former won a 1 up verdict.

Stratton and Eaton were all even at the turn but the Brae Burn player should have been at least 1 up but for an unfortunate pull at the eighth, when, with 2 for a half, he knocked Eaton's ball into the rough, giving the Winchester player a win, which squared the match.

Stratton was three up going to the 14th but Eaton got back two holes by winning the 16th and 16th and the remaining two holes were halves, Stratton winning one up.

Ed Childs, Winchester, sprung a surprise when he beat Francis Hersey, Wellesley, one up. Hersey was one up at the turn but soon lost his head and Childs went out in front at the 17th and held his advantage through the home hole.

COLLIER CALLS SHOTS AT WINCHESTER

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

20 GRAND IS READY FOR CLASSIC

Chicago, July 16 (US)—All's well with Twenty Grand, or seems to be. The Greentree stable colt, overwhelming favorite for the third running of the Classic Stakes, Arlington Park's big $70,000 race Saturday, was on view in a public workout today and looked perfectly fit.

It was not a fast work, but the good condition of Twenty Grand was evident. On a fast track he could have run two seconds faster and at no time during the work was he really given his head to run.

St. Brideaux, a stablemate of Twenty Grand, which will be coupled with him as an entry on Saturday, was out first galloping the mile and a quarter Classic route in 2.10.

Considering the track condition it was a good move that stamps St. Brideaux as a dangerous contender for second of third money in the big race on Saturday.

SHARKEY NEAR FIGHTING TRIM

Pompton Lakes, N. J., July 16 (US)—Five days of intensive training here for his 15-round match with Mickey Walker at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, next Wednesday night, has wrought a remarkable change in Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, whose physical condition had Johnny Buckley, his manager, worried as a gent with his entire capital banked in a wobbly trust company.

Rolls of fat about Sharkey's waist have disappeared like a keg of real beer at a longshoremen's outing; he's hardened so that he is impervious to any blow.

His wind and eyes are well-attuned, and Jack has shed seven pounds since his arrival, when he weighed 203½ pounds. At the conclusion of today's workout Sharkey weighed 196 pounds.

He has worked with a zest and has but one worry. His inability to cope with the lighter members of his sparring staff.

SHARKEY NEAR FIGHTING TRIM

Pompton Lakes, N. J., July 16 (US)—Five days of intensive training here for his 15-round match with Mickey Walker at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, next Wednesday night, has wrought a remarkable change in Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, whose physical condition had Johnny Buckley, his manager, worried as a gent with his entire capital banked in a wobbly trust company.

Rolls of fat about Sharkey's waist have disappeared like a keg of real beer at a longshoremens outing; he's hardened so that he is impervious to any blow.

His wind and eyes are well-attuned, and Jack has shed seven pounds since his arrival, when he weighed 203½ pounds. At the conclusion of today's workout Sharkey weighed 196 pounds.

He has worked with a zest and has but one worry. His inability to cope with the lighter members of his sparring staff.

MISS COLEMAN BEST DIVER

New York, July 16 (AP)—Miss Georgia Coleman of the Los Angeles A. C. today successfully defended her national high platform diving championship, defeating Frances Meany and Mrry Hogan of the Women's Swimming Association of New York in the seventh National A. A. U. outdoor swimming and diving championships, at Bronx beach.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Your swing can be mechanically wrong by being all arms and wrists in the back swing. Again, you can become afflicted with the reverse of this and be all body, turning in the back swing In the correct swing everything moves together which is the reason we have the saying "slow back." In the back swing which is all arms and wrists, you get to the top with a decided lean toward the right, as pictured. This isn't "getting in back of the ball" You get in back of the ball with the club and with the turning of your shoulders—not by weaving your body to the right. The arms should sweep back, with club, wrists and arms even with each other all the way The club turning at the top will draw up your wrists. Take your time with it.

BAKER LOOKS LIKE WINNER

Leslie Baker, who meets Werther Arcelli of this city in the feature 10-round bout for the Argonne A. A. at Braves Field next Monday night, is one of the best looking prospects to forge to the front locally in many years.

Baker has improved remarkably since he deserted the amateur ranks, where he won all kinds of medals and titles. Before becoming a boxer, Baker was quite an athlete at Watertown high school

Allen-Zelinsky Bout on Tonight

Harry Allen of Brockton is all set to reverse matters with Joe Zelinsky of Winthrop at Highland Park Avon, tonight. A few weeks ago Joe knocked out Harry in five rounds at Portland and this severe setback has worked up the Brockton boy to the point that nothing but a knockout over Zelinsky will satisfy the Brockton boy. Both are in the best condition for the battle. Matchmaker Jack Murphy has arranged his usual action preliminaries.

RED SOX SHIFTED

PILOT KEEPS PROMISE TO HOSE FANS

By JOE CASHMAN

Whatever else Manager John "Shano" Collins of the Red Sox may, or may not do, he never takes his lickings lying down.

Every losing streak the club falls into the means shifts in the lineup until a winning combination is found.

"Shano" benched Tom Oliver and Ollie Pickering, put Bill Sweeney back on first and Bobby Reeves on second and shifted Al Van Camp to centerfield and Ottis Miller to third base for the first game of the mid-week twin-bill against the Browns and the new team hung up the first Sox victory in nine starts.

It flopped in the nightcap, though, so further changes are likely unless it wins the fourth game of the engagement this p m.

Ever since the season opened Collins has kept his promise to bench any player who falls into a slump and he intends to keep right on doing so for the rest of the campaign.

The fans had heard so many managers in the past make the same promise without ever attempting to live up to it, that they took "Shano's" announcement with the proverbial grain of salt, but they must admit now that the present Sox boss has kept his word.

Collins' Shifting Keeps Team on Toes

The team hasn't enjoyed much prosperity despite Collins' efforts, but it's our guess that it would be a whole lot worse off than it is today but for the pilot's experiments.

"Shano's" latest shift, whether it results in any more victories, has already accomplished something. It has proved that if the Sox can find a second baseman, they have a first-class third sacker in Ottie Miller.

Miller was just ordinary when used around the keystone bag, but he guarded the hot corner in both ends of the mid-week twin-bill against the Browns better than any Fenway athlete has done since Buddy Myer left here three years ago.

He went miles to his right and left to rob the hostiles of hits, made two or three one-handed stabs of line drives fielded every chance perfectly, started two great double plays, nipped a couple of runners at the bag and made three hits.

That's the kind of a player he was supposed to be when he first joined the club at the start of the season but never was until yesterday.

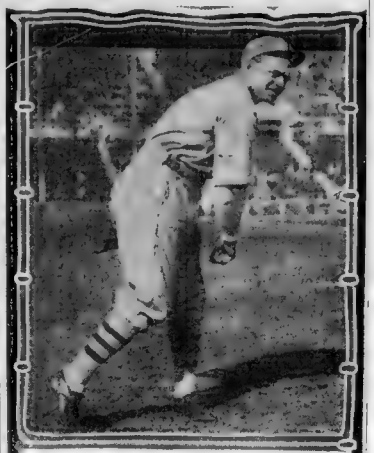
Garden Offers Baer Bout With Osa Here

Oakland, Cal., July 16—Max Baer, Oakland heavyweight, this afternoon received a wire from Madison Square Garden, New York, offering him a 10-round main bout the night of July 28 against Mateo Osa, young Spanish heavyweight sensation.

Baer will not accept until he learns if he will be reinstated by the California Athletic Commission at its meeting Saturday, he said.

SPORTS REEL

DAILY SHOTS FROM EVERYWHERE



He's just starting to pitch. WAITE HOYT won his third victory since joining the Athletics by turning back Detroit. Hoyt was booted around the American League from New York and Detroit and the "boys" were just about to pin a "has been" tag on him.

Longwood Bowl officials were right when they seeded WILMER ALLISON, Austin, Texas, second in the tournament at Chestnut Hill. Allison smashed his way to a three-set victory over Keith Gledhill of California, rising young star, to enter the quarter-finals.

Diamond Dust

All even in the series with the lowly Reds, the Braves are counting upon Fred Frankhouse, who has won his last six starts, to give them the edge by capturing the third game in Cincinnati.

The jinx which seems to follow the Warriors almost every time they tackle the Howleymen worked overtime in the second game of the series. Ed "Lefty" Brandt, seeking his 13th victory of the season, allowed the tail-enders only four hits and one run but he lost because his mates could make only five hits and not a single tally against Bob Odgen, a rookie.

Bob Asby, the Concord boy who failed to make the grade with the Red Sox, caught the game for the Reds.

Two victories over the Detroit Tigers while the Senators were being kept idle by rain enabled the world's champion Athletics to increase their lead in the American League race to seven games. The Macks now appear to have their third straight pennant safely tucked away.

The champion St. Louis Cardinals, National League leaders, were set back by Brooklyn but still have a lead of 5½ as the Giants took another on the chin from the Cubs who are now only one-half game back of second place.

A nation-wide business organization has reserved 200 boxes for today's Browns-Red Sox games for its New England salesmen, who will attend, accompanied by a brass band.

Earl Webb made but one hit in each game of the Wednesday double-header and each was a double, which brings his total of two-baggers for the season up to 39. He needs to make only 25 in the remaining 75 games to tie the world's record for doubles in a season.

The mystery of the discarded balls has been solved. In the opener of the Sox-Browns series Umpire-in-Chief Campbell took several brand new balls out of his pocket and threw them out of the game, much to the amazement of the fans. The explanation is that the "ump" was wearing a rubber shirt which was causing him to perspire freely and the sweat, running down his back, dampened the balls, making them unfit to use. These arbiters never seem to do anything right.

When Ed Bull Durham scored the winning run of the opening game of Wednesday's twin-bill after pitching two innings, he chalked up his first mound victory since May 10.

A FAREWELL

The perfect hour
That the winged joy, sweet honey loving rover
Grieve not—it is the law. Love will be flying—
Yes, love and all.
Glad was the living-blessed be the dying
Let the leaves fall.
Lest we appear too morbid—here goes!

HARRIET MONROE.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

We're a pushover for homemade bread or homemade pie of any variety . . . We always have been and shall are—hopeless in love with Madge Kennedy . . . And we don't care who knows it!! . . . We prefer summer to winter, probably because we're a hothouse flower and can't bear to be uncomfortable . . . We'd rather watch the Red Sox than the Braves, even though they aren't as good a team . . . Despite this, however, Rankin Drive-anville is our favorite ball player . . . We're never going to forgive ourself for casting the ballot for Al that The World paid us for giving them the story of Rudy Vallee and his grapefruit . . . But Col. Charles Augustus Lindbergh gives us a pain in the neck . . . For our money, Jack Dempsey was the greatest champion of our generation . . . Wendron Wilson is our hero and we devour eagerly everything that is written about him . . . We think "Rin" Tin is a swell nickname for a girl . . . We'd die happy if we could write with one-tenth the ease and grace of Alexander Woollcott . . . Ray Dower, when he was on the copy desk of The Courant, wrote the best headline we've ever seen . . . Jane "Little Show" Barcett is our favorite chorus girl . . . And we think "B" (Beatrice to you!) Lillie is the funniest woman in the world . . . No one as far as we are concerned, can ever take the place of Jack Donahue.

QUITE A TRICK

One of our pet peeves is to see a man drinking an ice cream soda and smoking a cigar at the same time . . . Another is to have anyone chew gum while they are talking to us . . . We have been happier living in Boston than we ever were before . . . Such NICE people! . . . We hate to have our hair cut and we usually let it grow and grow until someone takes us by the hand and leads us gently, but firmly, to a barber shop . . . We don't get enough sleep . . . We don't get enough sleep again . . . Most talkies bore us to death . . . We read anything and everything we can find that is even remotely concerned with the theater . . . Next to "Man About Town" Winchell is our favorite columnist . . .

Mathematics will always be a mystery to us . . . The Marine Corps is our favorite branch of the service . . . When we get rich we hope to live in New York and Boston . . . The mere thought of Glenda Farrell quickens our pulse . . . And this, despite the fact that we're partial to brunettes . . . Some day we hope to have enough money to finance and run a first class stock company the way we think it should be run . . . We'd give anything if we could conquer our overpowering shyness . . . We have no aisles resistance . . . If we could wear bathing suits as well as Clifton Webb does, nothing else would matter.

IF YOU WANT TO KNOW

Women in politics annoy us . . . So do most women press agents . . . Dartmouth is where we would like to see a son of ours matriculate—when, as and if . . . We think that Al Jolson in blackface, is the greatest single entertainer on the American stage . . . Our spine still gets tingly when we recall the first time we saw Ruthless in "Outward Bound" . . . We practically live on the int when the circus comes to town . . . We can't stroll, to our mind, is the best showman we have ever met . . . Patricia and Catherine Duffy are a beautiful girls in all this wide world.

Admiral Byrd, we think, is a "regular guy" . . . Our pet recreation is to lead a band or an orchestra . . . Walter Huston ranks Number One on our list of American actors . . . We think that Leonel is the best of the Barrymores . . . Some day we hope to visit Australia . . . And then cruise leisurely through the South Seas . . . We also nurse a secret yen to be a tap dancer . . . If we can't reach it by boat we'd rather make our trips by plane, if it's all the same to you . . . And if you want to make us happy, you might invite us to have some of those delightful four-day week-end trips next month.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

The port of Boston will be made the first port of call for steamers of the Blue Funnel Line cargo carriers to the Far East.

Regardless of the amount of cargo on board for other ports, Boston will be given this direct service. All these steamers will touch at the Army Base. Their arrival under the new schedule here will be the steamer Beleus, which left Singapore June 22.

WIGGIN ON VACATION

Arthur W. Wiggin, treasurer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is one of a large group of passengers that sailed for Jama ca, Panama and Colombian ports on the steamer Antinoe. Dentonth y Clevelander returned to Boston La. Guy after being pulled in by Nick Link. She will load at the Revere Sugar Refinery. After loading, she leaves here Friday for Buffalo.

GENERAL GAINS FOR STOCKS IN FINAL HOUR

New York, July 16—The financial markets regained composure today as conditions in Germany assumed a more reassuring aspect.

Inter-governmental conference at Paris, cairpeace attending the reopening of the German banks and the statement of the Reich's finance minister to the effect that maintenance of interest and sinking fund payments on the external debt were being regarded as "a matter of course" were developments helping to dispel some of the fog.

RALLY IN LAST HOUR.

Share prices on the New York Stock Exchange, after a desultory decline in the afternoon, rallied during the afternoon and closed with general advances. German bonds strengthened appreciably, while sterling exchange, whose weakness yesterday had caused considerable concern, was said to improve fractionally coincident with a decline 4⅝ marks a point in the French franc. Foreign currency quotations in many instances, notably the German mark, were only nominal.

Favorable European reports helped the bulls in the closing roundup of the shorts in the industrial favorites. United States Steel forged ahead from around 92¾ to 95, closing squarely on the top, for a net gain of 3 points for the day.

American Can closed at 103¾, up 2 points; Bethlehem Steel up 1¾ at 45⅝, and Westinghouse rose 1¾ at 85¾. General Electric closed fractionally higher at 41 and General Motors up ¾ at 37½.

RAILS COME LATE

American Tel. & Tel. was up 1¾ at 175¾; Allied Chemical up 2¾ at 118½, and Standard Oil of New Jersey up 1¾ at 37.

The rails were the last to join the rally and closing prices were therefore irregular. New York Central closed nearly a point lower, at 84½. Baltimore & Ohio was up 1¾ at 58¼; Southern Pacific down 1¼ at 78¾; Chesapeake & Ohio up ¾ at 34 and New Haven down ¾ at 69⅝.

Calumet & Arizona closed 4¼ points higher, at 39½ on announcement of the merger terms with Phelps Dodge Corporation. Anaconda Copper gained 2 points at 25½.

Improved Tone Seen in London's Dealings

London, July 16 (AP)—The stock market closed today with distinctly improved appearance, reflecting a general belief that relief measures for Germany will come out of the meeting at London on Monday.

British government stocks, which fell sharply in the past week, recovered fractionally.

Foreign exchanges were slightly better, favoring the pound sterling. The fact that the Bank of England made no change in its rates had a stabilizing effect.

Closing Is Firm on Bourse in Paris

Paris, July 16—Prices closed firm on the Bourse on optimistic predictions over the Paris conference to be held Friday. Values rose during much of the session.

GRAINS HIGHER IN CHICAGO

Chicago, July 16 (INS)—The entire grain list closed stronger on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Corn values showed the most gains for the session, closing 2¼ to 3¼c up with September leading. Wheat was 1-¾ to 1¼c better, further recovering from the recent low records. Oats were 1¼ to 1¾c higher and rye 1¼ to 1¾c up.

Trade was fairly active in all p's and price changes rapid, especially in September corn. The feature, in wheat was the remarkable resilience the market made to hedging pressure early in the session.

Kimberly-Clark's Surplus $504,340

Kimberly-Clark Corporation reports values available for the common stock for the quarter ended June 30 was $504,340 after charges, pref. stock and preferred dividends, equivalent to $1.01 a share on 499,800 no par shares.

Surplus available for the common for the six months ended June 30 was $988,488 after taxes and charges and preferred dividends, equal to $1.97 a share, as against $1,527,399, or $3.05 a share in the first six months of last year.

Foreign Exchanges Show an Easy Tone

New York, July 16 (AP)—Foreign exchange parity: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain, demand 4.84⅛, cable 4.84⅛; 60-day bills 4.81½. France: demand 3.93, cables 3.93⅛. Italy, demand 5.21⅜, cables 5.22.

Demand: Germany 22.75, Argentine 39.62⅛, Brazil 7.38, Tokio 49.33, Montreal 99.66.

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New York, July 16—Cotton futures today closed 26 to 30 higher. July, 9.14; Oct. 9.47; Dec. 9.68-9.70; Jan. 9.81; March 9.97-99; May 10.14-15. Spot steady; middling 9.30.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS Department of Public Utilities. D.P.U. 4214). Boston, July 1, 1931. Gas Shut-Off Date Notice. Notice is hereby given that the date for securing the installation of gas appliances or equipment in connection with gas service has been set to prevent or retard the escape of gas in case of fire. Be it known that on and after the 1st day of July, 1931, no gas will be turned on by the Gas Company in any building in the City of Boston, or in any building supplied with gas by the Gas Company in the towns of Arlington, Belmont, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Milton, Newton, Somerville, Watertown, Winchester and Winthrop, unless and until all gas appliances and gas piping in such building shall have been inspected and approved by the Gas Company or by a person authorized by the Department, and a certificate of such approval issued by the Gas Company or by such person. Any person who shall, after January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-one, turn on gas in any building for the purpose of measuring gas supplied to such building, or for the purpose of testing the service pipe or gas in the interior piping of such building, or who shall disconnect the intake pipe leading to the meter in such building, except as may be prescribed and enforced by the authority of this order of the Department, rendered ALLAN BROOKS, Secretary of the Department.

TO all persons who may have claims against Industrial Bank & Trust Company, 1762 Washington Street, Boston, Massachusetts, now in possession of the Commissioner of Banks:

You are hereby notified in accordance with the provisions of General Laws, Chapter 167, Section 26, to present your claim or claims against said trust company to the Commissioner of Banks at said Boston thereof at the room of Industrial Bank & Trust Company, 1762 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., on or before the 17th day of August, 1931.

Trucks as Buses

Imperilling the Children

Twenty children returning from Revere Beach in a truck were injured in an auto collision, some of them seriously.

This was the second serious accident of similar character recently in Greater Boston.

Perhaps the traffic officials will forget the innocent parker a few minutes and allot some of their superior attention to grave matters involving life and death.

The owner of any ramshackle old truck can throw a few boxes and dilapidated chairs into it, pile it full of children and start out for the beaches or groves, usually in the extraordinary traffic of a weekend or holiday.

If their parents are possessed of no more common sense than to expose them to the menace to safety, it is time for the State officials to step in.

Any truck which carries immature children in the congested traffic of our cluttered highways ought to be licensed for safety. Any driver to whom their lives are entrusted ought to be certified as to his peculiar ability for this responsibility.

But it does not want to see further slaughter of the innocents under conditions which can be effectively and sensibly rectified.

We're Too Polite

Curbing Our Patriotic Outbursts

The officials at Washington in charge of the great celebration being planned in honor of the 200th birthday anniversary of General George Washington have decided to omit the pageant depicting the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Yorktown only meant the culmination of seven years war for liberty, the birth of the American Nation and the crowning military achievement of the Father of His Country.

We in Boston might follow suit by closing Faneuil Hall, putting a fence around Boston Common and ripping down the statue of Samuel Adams.

Let us be logical and take back the liberty we gave Cuba as the result of the war of 1898. It hurt the feelings of Spain.

Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic ought to be struck out of history. Think how it hurt the feelings of the other fellows who wanted to do it first.

When they read the dispatches from Washington, we can expect them forthwith to remove the splendid statue of Lord Nelson in Trafalgar Square; or to send word to France that Napoleon licked Wellington at Waterloo.

Police and Killers

New Times, New Methods

A young man named Hurley is sentenced to death for the murder of Patrolman O'Brien of Brookline.

O'Brien was a brave man. He seems to have been shot to death by Hurley while he was effecting the arrest of Hurley's accomplice.

All the tributes to the bravery of this policeman and the expiation of the crime by the young bandit will not restore him to life and return him to his family.

The people expect the police now to protect themselves adequately. The present wave of banditry has erased the old thought that the policeman must ask questions first and arrange his own protection later.

The modern crook possesses less of the courage but more of savage cunning than his predecessor. He has new tools for his burglaries, new weapons for his ruthless killings, new instruments with which to effect his escape.

Modern police methods have not kept pace with him. The policeman must be trained not only in the use of firearms. There must be police schools of strategy which will teach these officers how to cope with criminals who travel in pairs and gangs.

If O'Brien had been taught to bring this young pair at the point of a gun to the stationhouse and done his examining of them there, they would have paid the penalty of their marauding and the life of a good man would have been spared.

A Break for Fido

Boston Won't Impound Him

The animal trainer in a circus now showing in New England says that the tigers are invariable weather prophets.

When they "meow," it is a sure sign the storm will pass, the clouds disappear, Old Sol will shine resplendent and perfect weather will take the stage for a long run.

Peter McNally of Boston, greatest of all press agents, would have thought up a better one.

When the groundhog sees its shadow, the cows lie down in the field and the household tabby purrs and cleans the top of its left ear with its paw—sure signs of rain, we are told.

Nature fakirs!

Anyway, man's unfailing and reliable friend, the dog, is not going to be impounded the next ninety days. The Boston City Council gave Fido a break.

Careful Man

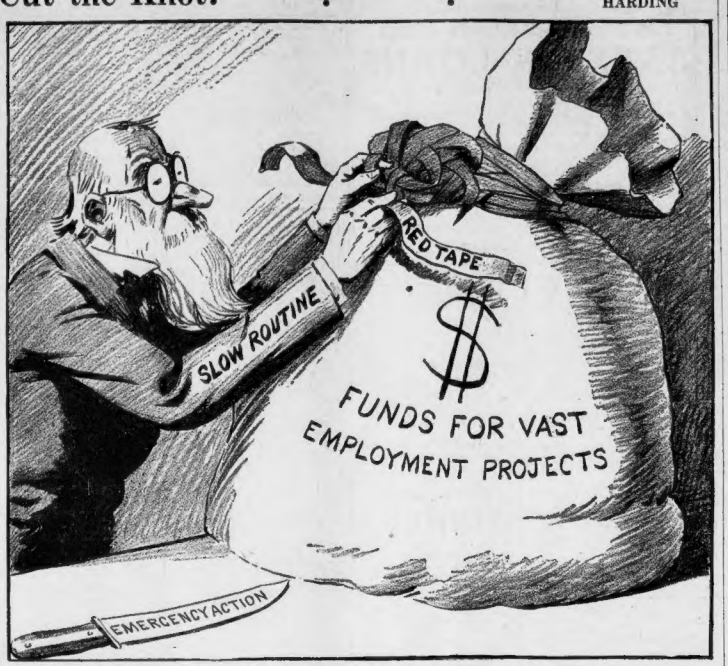
An eminent scientist says that he can turn ultra-violet or black rays on fingernails and then:

"Your fingernails fluoresce or glow under those rays. I can tell by the glow how long it has been since your nails were manicured."

The dear man puts himself to a lot of trouble when his wife undoubtedly decides at a glance just how long it has been since some of those at the farthest edge of her social circle got a real good nail nipping.

Cut the Knot!

By NELSON HARDING



The job-creating funds are wound
By red tape twisted round and round
And back again until it seems
That it will never be unbound.

There's so much tape it takes a lot
Of time, and now we haven't got Much time to lose untying it—
So take the knife and cut the knot.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

That Niche in the Wall

IT'S HARD to find. You go up, first, through the pine grove in the northy forty acres . . . easy walking over the springy, russet floor of needles, through slanting shafts of claret light, with the great branches spreading in peacock smoke overhead.

Elsie Robinson

Suchhush! Not even the sound of your own moccasined feet, shuttling in and out of the light—

Then, abruptly, you're up against a wall of chaparral with the trail lost for yards at a time. Thorny branches of greasewood and "jimosal" tangled above you . . . satiny red trunks of manzanita with beaten silver disks of leaves . . . and, brushing your face as you crawl, the gummy, aromatic mat of "mountain misery," the powdery, pink dust, smelling like dried apples and cinnamon.

Suddenly the chaparral lets you down into the green, shadowed vault of the creek with the water lisping and clucking between the ferns and the oaks arching above you, holding flecks of sky like blue tile set in darkness.

After that you go up for perhaps half a mile . . . hauling yourself over great, mossy boulders . . . breaking your way through webs of wild grape . . . until, having almost forgotten what you came for, you stumble upon the stone hut the old Frenchman built.

It's in ruins, now—two of the walls down. Nobody knows when it was new. Before the Gold Rush, anyway, for the first '49ers, prospecting up the creek, came upon his bones. He had died, there in the corner, where the rocks are caved in now and an old wood rat is nesting.

How long did he live there? Why did he come? Was he looking for gold? Or was he some frantic, twisted soul, running away from his world? No one knows. Only this is sure. They found his skeleton in that corner. The coyotes has rummaged his bones a bit, but the skull's eyeless sockets still stared at that niche in the wall.

He had built that niche more carefully than the rest, lining it with fine pebbles from the creek. Even though it was empty when the prospectors found him, its use was plain. There was a cross there once, and a candle. A cross holding the twisted body and the brave face of another lonely Man.

Out there, hundreds of miles from the things men consider worth while—pleasure, romance, trade, excitement . . . alone with his grief or his greed, his hate or remorse or bitter surrender . . . he had built that house. But even there, at his last stand, when he was through with everything else, he had made that niche to hold the one thing that persisted—his faith.

And standing there, with my living eyes set on the place where his dead eyes had rested, I thought how that is the way with all of us. Joy comes, joy goes . . . we turn our back on one dream after another. But always, built somewhere in the wall of life, amongs the rocks and the rubble and common clay, there is a niche. A niche for faith. And always, through long, empty nights, through weary days, a candle burns.

On the Atlantic

The Sea Is Dusty

AT SEA, July 16—There is dust in mid ocean and I hasten to add I have touched nothing stronger than Evian. This morning I discovered a thin wind whorled layer on my typewriter and other articles in the cabin. It drifts from volcanic eruptions and often settles on various stretches of the sea.

So for lack of something to do I went in for a round of dusting. I rub a mean rag on smooth surfaces, too. Tonight is gala night and I expect to be one of the old fools who will wear a paper cap and sit at a table all evening holding aloft a red toy balloon.

It is odd how a sea voyage changes one's routine. You do things aboard ship you would never think of doing elsewhere. For instance, for years I have eaten but two meals a day—breakfast and dinner. But here I go in for breakfast, 10 o'clock bouillon, lunch, 5 o'clock tea and cakes and late dinner.

More familier faces begin to appear as the vessel nears the other side. John Anderson, the dramatic critic, waved from a deck chair today. Henry McBride, the art critic, is also a passenger. Then there are those strange creatures who appear only around dusk. It is like lifting an old log.

Here a withered Marquis, there a tottering Countess and over yonder an ashen-faced fellow with a witch-like shock of hair. They crawl once or twice slowly around the promenade and vanish. Seldom are they seen save for these brief constitutionals.

I notice in the ship's daily that all bridge activities are under the auspices of Lenn, Inc. And that on the morrow Gratz M. Scott, Esq., President of the Cavendish Club, will discuss the hands that were played today in the Duplicate Bridge Tournament. Bridge is the favorite game of the majority.

The captain varies his dinner guests nightly. My wife and I are on his list tonight along with Mrs. Ray Long, Mrs. Conde Nast, Gloria Swanson, Edna Ferber, Gertrude Lawrence and two others whose names I did not catch from the bowing courier who called at the cabin with the summons. Or is it a command?

There are on board five titles, one senator, one judge, one congressman, one colonel, three captains and, to my certain knowledge, two international gigolos.

• • •

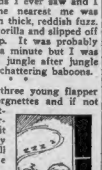
I am told that the ocean "greyhounds" — professional gamblers — are along with the rest of us facing a depression. Many of the trans-Atlantic sharks have shifted to the Pacific in the hope of better opportunities. Few passengers will gamble for high stakes these perilous times.

• • •

Dropping into the smoking room after 14 turns on the promenade I sank down in a deep cushioned chair. Next to me was a man with the largest hands I ever saw and I noticed the one nearest me was haired over with thick, reddish fuzz. I thought of a gorilla and slipped off into a light nap. It was probably no more than a minute but I was chased through jungle after jungle by an army of chattering baboons.

• • •

I have seen three young flapper types lifting lorgnettes and if not due to nearsightedness is certainly a silly bit of swank. By tomorrow I'll be even more cranky.



This piece sounds unusually goofy. First dust on the ocean and just now in the trunk room something buzzed out which I swear was a bumble bee. I'm afraid to look under the bed for fear I'll see a partridge or something.

Anyway the journey is almost ended. I hear them rustling trunks for Plymouth. That's the British Hobgoken plus croupier weather.

Just Folks

The Little Tasks

The little task asks nothing more
Than tapping at a neighbor's door
And passing in a small bouquet
Of summer blossoms, fresh and gay,
For one upon a bed of pain,
Yet long its memory will remain.
Thought whispered: "Just a mile from here
Lives one who needs a word of cheer.
Five minutes of your time is all
'Twill take to make that promised call.
Turn now and go your friend to see
And long remembered you will be."
The simple tasks, so quickly wrought,
Ask just a little time and thought,
A moment here, a moment there,
Which every mortal has to spare,
But they are cherished when are lost
Occasionally life has need
Of one to do some daring deed,
But every hour of every day
Best loved and honored most are they
Who think to stop where troubles dwell

Silhouettes

SENATOR GEORGE MOSES may have slipped one over on Senator Jim Watson in the matter of having the George Rogers Clark Memorial at Vincennes, Ind., made of New Hampshire granite, but he sure was asleep at the switch in the matter of having the new public buildings in Washington made of Indiana limestone.

IT LOOKS as though Mrs. Gann couldn't quite make up her mind to being the mere sister of a Senator.

OUR AVIATORS may appear at times to be lacking in ordinary prudence, but we note that they're all heading now for Point Barrow, the Yukon and Siberia.

Earnestness, Dignity and Self-Respect

MARY, A GOOD QUEEN

These three pictures of the first lady in Europe are pleasing, because Queen Mary possesses the characteristics that men most admire in women, EARNESTNESS, DIGNITY AND SELF-RESPECT.

Some young women of our day don't suspect it, and many won't believe it, but nevertheless, while men AMUSE themselves with the light and frivolous, that lack self-respect, their real liking is for a woman that respects herself and demands respect from others—women, and men especially.

They will be interested in the lower picture, showing the Queen in a different costume, different jewels and ornament for the hair, with 4 large precious stone in the center, sapphire, ruby or emerald, presumably, a pearl collar and a magnificent double necklace of pearls.

More important, however, than the beautiful jewels is the excellent taste that Queen Mary shows in everything. She dresses modestly, and commands those that attend her court to dress modestly also.

The British are to be congratulated on possessing a Queen that sets so good an example, and knows so well how TO BE A QUEEN.
